Also curious after an earlier post about ID's new website and upcoming professional audio page I wrote and email and got these responses...first one from sales...second one from support....

1)...We still plan to do pro audio products including PARIS but unfortunately there is no set time for this. Sorry!

2)...We are working on a few new products and I would suggest you check out our web site from time to time. But I can assure you there will no development in PARIS hardware front, as it has been discontinued for a long time now.

Would you be able to elaborate on the status of your pro audio products and whether or not there will be any further development of the PARIS software at this point. There is still a large user base for PARIS that use many workarounds just to continue to use it. Perhaps there was some sort of time deal with Emu after discontinuation of the hardware product??? There are quite a few that are still hoping for future software development for this great sounding platform. Any light you could shed on this matter would be greatly appreciated.
Thank you,

I'm working on some DAW software too...

....it'll be ready "soon".

(so, if I keep saying that for five years running, will you believe me, too?)

I know this has been there banter for over 5 years now but I find it funny that after this time they just put it to bed....perhaps there was some timeframe deal with emu etc....i don't know...just found it interesting that they updated their website and have new section titled pro audio with a paris picture by it...
We all know better than to expect anything but it never hurts to prod a dying horse a bit to see what comes out of him.
