Not quite in service yet. It has to charge for 8 hours first.

But it's in the building. :o) There was a line at the store out on to the street. Business is booming in computer parts on the Easter weekend. I got it though, and it's unpacked. Now I've gotta load up some software and see what I need to tweak before I put it in service.

Thank you again to all the people who donated. Excellent work. And you'll note we've had no outages since the server has been taken off the UPS and plugged into mains. :o) And hopefully once the UPS is on we'll have even less... or, well, not less than none of course, but, oh you know what I mean! ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

Kim,
Looks cool. Post a liink to it's specs. =20
I'm curious.

Very cool. I've got 3 x of those in my machine room. Excellent units. I have tripped a breaker here before and those puppies kept 3 x computers, 6 x CRT's, 3 x digital patchbays, a Lexicon PC 90, a Mytek A/D converter, 3 x MECs and 2 x WC modules running for over 10 minutes. I don't know how much longer they would have gone because I flipped the breaker back on. Saved a session for sure.

Good choice. Where's that beer link? You deserve one.

Aaron,
Did Kim get the 1500VA version? Looks different. Specs seem good = although I'm not sure what's good enough besides time and wattage.

Sync to mains ?
Crest voltage ?
Filtering ? =20

Excellent. That's what I like to hear. Well this one only has to run a single box, and I don't plug the monitor into the UPS as I don't really need to.
So it's just running one box and the router. This unit is well qualified to do more, but I went the cheaper option last time and got burned with it failing 2 years later. I figure this puppy will last 10+ years (with a battery replacement half way). Hopefully 20 years if I can still buy batteries for it. I wonder if the newsgroup will still be around then?

Since you mention it I could sure use some beer money. ;o) Not because I'm out of money though. I've gone and stuffed up today, and it's all the UPS's fault!! ;o) I assume it's the same in the U.S... over here the EFTPOS cards have a daily withdrawl limit. Mine is $800. I spend $569 on the UPS, another $50 on other bits I needed to change UPS's, and then bought some other stuff, and suddenly my card started coming up as declined because it's over the daily limit. It's infuriating! I've still got cash, but it's stuck in the account and I can't get it!

I was planning on going to the pub this afternoon too, just for a short burst, but I've only got $2:70 in my wallet! ;o) I'm thinking of calling them and asking "Look, I've got $16 available to withdraw. can I create a $16 Eftpos tab and drink a couple of pints? ;o)

Indeed I think I will. ;o)

As for that actual beer button, I do plan to do it (how could I not ;o).
I hope nobody gets the wrong idea from it and thinks I'm in it for the cash.
;o) I'll see how I go over the weekend. I'll be putting a big peice of text on it which says "Now there is no obligation to do this... in fact, I would encourage people not to do it, but if you must, this button will donate to my beer fund". ;o)

....but if the total on the beer fund reaches half as much as was donated to the UPS I'm going to send most of it back. ;o)

....or have one hell of a night. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

The complication is that the server runs Linux, and hence I can't load the software on it, and it's the only box that plugs in to the UPS, so there's no box which could run this software and warn me. Unless there's a Linux version on there, but there's no mention of it on the disk.

So it's really going to be a case of loading the software on my windows laptop and configuring the UPS to act like I want it to, and then leaving it to do it's thing unfortunately. An email would be fantastic if I could make it work though.

I should check the Linux community and see if they've made anything which will work on it. Seeing as how major UPS players aren't producing Linux software, I'd make a guess that the Linux community has a solution.

Cheers,
Kim.

Kim,

I've been swamped and forgetful the last week or so... I will paypal a little to help the cause later today.

Kim,
I haven't been watching the posts so much lately. If I knew what this was about, I would probably donate. Is it something for the forum??

Hey Steve

the UPs for the forum server bit the big one so Kim asked for voluntary donations at:

http://news.parisnewsgroup.com/

Hit the donations button. It will take you directly to his Paypal Account

Ah, but if I get an email warning I'll sometimes be able to fix the problem before the server even goes out! :o)

I can get an extra battery pack for the UPS for $270 Australian (about $200US).
Hence if the amount starts getting close to that I'll go and buy one. There are a couple of donations already in the kitty for that.

The extra battery pack will give us 3x the backup time. I suspect backup time as it stands will be about an hour at a guess, so we should get about 3 hours with the extra battery. I'm completely guessing on the times though.

Cheers,
Kim.

From what I can tell on the site, this only works with Smart-UPS which doesn't include mine.

Bummer. Sounds good though.

Cheers,
Kim.

Well from one point I guess is actually is. We're at 50Hz here. Aren't you guys at 60Hz?

Though I'm quite sure it travels the same speed down the wires. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.
