I don't think it's ever been more important to the country . . . at least not in my lifetime.

Vote for what? They're all idiots with no plan. Show me a candidate with a written plan that shows clearly what he/she stands for, what immediate goals they have with a roadmap, what budget they propose to do it with and what timeframe they have. Oh and the milestones to indicate their progress along the way.

Hmm.....NONE of them.....surprise surprise

Yes you do... you can complain that everyone sucked so bad that not a single one of 'em deserved your vote in the first place... which is about the point that I'm getting to.

And to me I don't care if they are of any party. I just want specifics.

Anything else is just rhetoric. Then I see the news saying Barack Obama is the new great thing. So I watch him on Larry King and he's just talking broad brush strokes pie in the sky. Sorry Barack, but if you can't lay it out in detail I'm not interested. Oh, and I reserve the right to QUESTION your detail and ask for more substantiation of your proposal as if you had one.

Well heck, Dick Cheney's brother is a surveyor in these parts and I figured if he got elected he would give no bid contracts to Halliburton to suck prarie dogs out of their burrows and send them to fight in Iraq since they are probably smarter than the soldiers over there.

OK, I really didn't think this would turn into a discussion, so I apologize for that. But I just wanted to say one thing before I drop this.

It's absurd to say "they're all . . ." anything. Whenever I hear huge generalities about any group of people, I figure I'm listening to someone who simply doesn't want to really look a little deeper. There are honest, ethical people in government, and if they're outnumbered it's precisely because as fat, comfy Americans we have been apathetic and cynical long enough to let the crooks and liars take over.

And even if it was true that they're ALL bad, which it isn't, I would still be saying, "Please vote," because sometimes choosing between the lesser of two evils is a life or death decision.

You're not an idiot John,
but.....argh!!! Never mind;-)
I mean it's a good idea to vote, trying to change America a bit for the worlds sake. We can all be small wheels helping the bigger ones to go around and make a better world for us all, wherever we're living in our great, little world of today. Especially when we have got the choice to vote, where so many good people around the world have fought for up against the years.
We have all heard the words "Human Rights" up against the years, but how many of us are doing something with it? Sarah is one of them trying to do something, where some other better wish to build or buy a doghouse for their own world;-)

I don't think I've ever been so bored with voting.....at least in my lifetime. I won't even bother with it. Penn Gillette is right. It's like the Moe, Curly and Larry routine where he holds up 5 fingers and says "Pick 2" and then pokes you in the eyes, or like the movie war games where the only winning strategy is not to play.

I'm still waiting for a list of the politicians that have a detailed plan ready for scrutiny. hmmm hehe,

John

I'm still waiting for a list of the politicians that have a detailed plan ready for scrutiny. Do you know of any? hmmm

John,

If you think I believe the Dems have a perfect plan and will make everything swell, you are sadly mistaken. I believe the Democrats will have their share of crooks and liars, including plenty of pocket lining old school fat cats.

Even so they will be FAR better.

and most dangerous administration in the modern era and they have to go.
I only hope my vote will actually be counted.

You know John, I hear you! Maybe you should run for office?

The problem I see is this: people are for the most part pretty stupid. Shocking, I know. Who in this country would actually read a detailed plan of action? I think if there were enough people who demand that (over say probably the meager 15% who care) that might happen. But that doesn't sound like the US to me...

Who actually cares about anything if nothing really touches their daily lives?

At what point does your average citizen stand up and go to the streets?

I'm really amazed at our populace's (and my own) ability to sit comfortably watching TV. But if you don't have a draft touching you, or if you don't think your privacy counts for anything, then no one really cares. Sad, really.

But I feel like my own voice is pretty drowned out by complacency...

I also hope my vote is counted, even if I can't stand most of the people I'm voting for. Would our election process stand up to world scrutiny? No. There has to be a better way.

Oh, and while I'm on a rant, I can't stand that horrible John Mellencamp "song" Chevrolet is hawking on TV. Oh, right, rural white dudes own the country. We've come so far!

So, how many of us here are still using Paris?

Peace,

Graham (who is probably stupid too)

Well, you're free to vote or not, and sit around waiting for perfection to come knocking. Hope that works out OK for you. At least you won't be voting for someone you think is incompetent.

I'm with Sarah, definitely not sitting this one out. And since I see no reason to trust hackable voting machines, I'm voting absentee on a paper ballot.

Cheers,

I don't know if it's true, but I heard someone on the radio saying that absentee ballots aren't even counted unless the margin is small enough for them to make a difference. It doesn't sound right to me, but that's what someone said on some radio talk show (don't even remember what show it was).

Could they have been referring to "provisional ballots" rather than absentee ballots?

I'm sure they said absentee, but like I said, I wasn't really paying attention until I heard that comment, then they quit talking about it. :>
It just struck me wrong, that this would be the case.

For absentee ballots returned on or before election day I do not believe that is the case.

They are counted with a scanning machine in the county where I vote, which has its own problems, but is probably less hackable than a touch screen machine and has the advantage of the original paper ballot for manual recounting as needed.

I did some checking and it looks like that was bogus info from the radio. At least the federal absentee web site seems to indicate that absentee ballots will be counted.
