Turns out that the live "instant cd" thing that my friends and I have been doing has started to get a buzz amongst the indie and folk crowd, and we've been asked to do it for a few more shows, and possibly a whole festival.

Now, in the past, we just fed the FOH stereo mix directly into a cd recorder, then spooled off copies in a couple of duping towers for the fans who had bought copies. I'm sure a lot of them didn't know the difference, but I know you guys know that when you hear a FOH mix up close, in your face, and dry, it generally sucks.

Now, for the 6 years I did the acoustic thing at my theatre, I multitracked everything off the board into Paris, so I could play mix engineer later (or, as I learned from Emerick's book - "balance engineer").

For the Peterik show we just did, we tried something different. I gave our recording guy my C16 and an adat feed from the Paris mix buss. He sat there during the gig with headphones and one hand on the C16.

Bingo. Waaayyyyyyyyy better recording.

Realized afterwards I could also put a little plate on the auxes and add some sweetening, which we will do next time.

So, it's time to rack up the MEC and the G4 (gonna throw in the 442 and IF-2 so I can get an extra 6 channels with one more EDS card) and take this on the road.

If I actually make some money at this, the wife will be much more amenable to toy purchases....

One question - two EDS cards, possibly 2 MEC's with 8in cards.

Aside from the EDS jumpers, can I get by without clocking?

Up to 2 MEC's and as many EDS cards as you want on internal clock... no problem.

David.

Well, I currently have three.... but if two end up in a mobile rig, I should, by rights, have two in the home rig as well.

Right?

Problem is, I have to feed the MEC's. $235 for a second EDS for the mobile rig, $235 for a second EDS for the home rig.... then I need two more 8in cards for the road rig.....

And then the road rack will need a dolly, since two mecs with cards plus a G4 ain't light anymore. And the second case for the C16's, and an LCD and keyboard/mouse, plus the 32-channel snake, and the patch panels....

Dammit!!!!!! You guys are going to suck me into the whole swirling vortex of gearslutdom, aren't you?????

Bastards.

Fine. Let me get the MacBook Pro paid off - the little woman isn't that agreeable to toy purchases until the last one is paid off....

I hate you people.
