I almost got into a physical brawl with some asshole today who was *'in with me out on the highway on my way home. It's been a really hard/stressful week and I haven't had nearly enough sleep. The guy was driving down the highway (70MHP speed limit) going about 40 and I passed him on the shoulder to get around him because he wouldn't move over. When he saw that I was going to be passing him he floored his car to try to keep me from passing. When this didn't work he got pissed and ran right up on my bumper and started honkin his horn. I just pulled over and I musta' looked like some insane maniac when I jumped out of the car and started walking back to his car because he rolled up the window 3/4 of the way and started whining and bitchin' about how what I had done was illegal. I told him that if he had a problem with my driving to call the damn cops (I didn't say "fuckin" cops because he had a couple of kids in the car whose eyes were as big around as saucers) and that he'd better stay off my ass. We didn't part as friends. I was so mad I was literally shaking when I drove away.

I need to get more sleep. I'm wayyyy too old to be losin' my temper and swellin up like an old toady frog. I'm old and not a big, badass by an stretch and the guy probably could have whupped my ass on any given day.

I'm going over to the hot springs across the street, soak up some lithium and go to bed.

G'nite....

Damn Deej...

Maybe you SHOULD move back here...you know how we handle road rage (2 words...1st word = Smith...2nd word = a popular veg oil)

Get some rest, then go find that SOB and remove his spleen through his nostrils...

I had been out in the boonies since around 5:30 this morning and had my "bear deterrent" onboard but I doubt I'll ever see that guy again and .I'm too damn old to be taking up medicine at this time in my life.

It's easy to get PO'd on the road. I've been there too. But it ain't worth it. Take a deep breath, turn on the radio, or do what I do sometimes when some old timer does something not too bright down here in FLA - I imagine it's my father and how I would feel if somebody was honkin' and cussin' at him...

Never ever stop and get into it with strangers on the highway...

Never ever. Really awful things happen. All the time.

Remember, anger makes you slow, blind, and stupid. Keep your cool and you will be fine.

And yes, I am speaking to myself too.

A friend got into it with a creep, a punk who dared him to do anything. He did something. He went to the trunk and pulled out a Samurai sword and put the point on the guy's chest. The guy dared him to use it...

No one got hurt, but my friend went to jail and lost all weapons...

Ironically, the more you are able to defend yourself, the cooler you need to be.

Deej,

I feel for you, man. I hate slow drivers. If they're not going to go the speed limit, they should notice when someone behind them would like to and pull the hell over, since they're obviously not in a hurry. I'm convinced that getting behind the wheel of a vehicle automatically drops a human being's IQ by about 20 points.

But my biggest pet peeve is tailgaters, and I've done all kinds of mean things to them. My favorite trick was one I used back when I drove for the local wheelchair lift bus door-to-door service. My bus was a really old 3-speed Mercedes, held about 20. I never drove slow, but there was always some idiot that would tailgate me. I would just slow down to about 15-20 for a few seconds, then put it in 3rd gear and floor the accelerator. This would result in the tailgater being buried in a thick, smelly black cloud of diesel fumes. Now that was fun. My passengers always enjoyed that one, too.

I had a guy once who literally made it a habit to seek me out on a certain time and stretch of road. I finally blew my cool and started packing.... you guessed it.... a bottle of Sue Bee Honey and a sack of Martha White baking flour.... honey first... real light little string for about 7 or 8 seconds and then the flour by the butt end of the sack... left arm out the side window and the whole thing to the wind.

I like my cruise control because then I don't focus on the "getting there" part and instead can think about what I'm going to do when I'm there.

Tailgaters are definitely the worst. There's two kinds: the idiot in a piece of shit pickup or something who thinks he's racing NASCAR and the space cadet chick putting on mascara in the rearview. My theory with idiots: the worse their chances of stopping in an emergency - the closer they tailgate.

That may be standard issue equipment in Cali, but here in Texas you tend to find a bit longer-range weapons.

I agree... which is why I never pack heat, even though a few hours of classes will get you a concealed-carry permit here. I would've been tempted to shoot out a couple of tires yesterday when the freeway was jammed-up & there was this asswipe weaving in & out of everyone else doing 15-20mph at the time. Nearly clipped me & a couple other cars in doing so. Now, really, I wouldn't have done that, but SOME people might have! That's the kind of behavior that causes freeway shootings, though.... doesn't matter if they're doing it because they're a dickhead, or because their wife just went into labor & they're trying to get her to the hospital before the baby shows up. Gun-haters, take heed: How often do you hear about road-rage shootings in California; a place with pretty strict anti-gun laws... all the time, right? How often you hear about them in Texas; a place where any dork can tote one around with them wherever they go? Hardly ever.

As far as carrying my 9-mil around in case I would ever get mugged or whatever, I don't believe in that, either... I would rather just non-violently & calmly give the guy the - what, 50 bucks? - I might be carrying in my wallet, then have to live the rest of my life with the knowledge that I killed a guy over 50 bucks. Plus, I'd still prolly go to jail for it; or the "victim's" family would sue me for all I had. Now, someone breaking into my house, OTOH, that's where in Texas you can justify unloading a few rounds into someone's chest & get away with it, which is why my weapon stays within a couple seconds' reach of my bed... if someone breaks in & I've forgotten to set the alarm, that's plenty of time for the dog to alert, and there's enough distance/time between the bedroom, and any of the doors they might be coming in, for them to be quickly transformed from "intruders" to "targets".

BTW, to gun-owners & gun-haters alike, a dog is the best home security you can have... lots of cops will tell you this, too. Whether you have an alarm or not! The dog will very often hear sounds that are ABOUT to trigger the alarm (someone trying to manipulate a lock/door handle/window latch, someone outside rustling in the leaves/grass or feet shuffling on the patio/porch), so the dog will start barking before the window breaks or the door opens & the alarm goes off. If it's a medium-size or larger dog with a good, strong voice, this can often deter the criminal right there... they don't know if you've got a friendly lab that wants to jump up & greet them, or a rottweiler that wants to tear their throat out. Either way, if the idiot is still determined at that point & comes in anyway, you've got a few seconds more notice than the alarm itself can provide... this can make a big difference in your favor, whether your security strategy is to shoot the motherfucker, or have your family escape out a window. The other thing the dog will do that an alarm can't (unless you have different sounds coded for each possible entrance... no reasonably-priced system can do this, as the usually all have one bell/siren/horn/whatever, triggered by any of the sensors) is to tell you where the intruder IS. The alarm goes off, you have no idea which entrance has been breached, you hear the dog's barking coming from the area of the back door, you know where the intruder is. Plus, c'mon, dogs are great pals, anyway; so why not have one?

Or as an alternative to the alerting aspect, you could get three basenji's and the intruder would be on the floor without the dogs giving him any audible warning (they don't bark, they just kind of "snuffle" a bit). :D

How often do you hear of a woman waking up to find a rapist standing over her bed with a knife and a roll of duct tape if she's got a dog (any kind of dog) in the house? I'd say the stats would be something like "never". We don't worry about that stuff here. Crash and Muffin explode if someone is walking within 50 yards of our house at night. Just the sound pressure wave from their warning would probably deter all but the most foolhardy.....it's something you can physically feel....and the foolhardy would be met by a fully awakened and armed humaniod if they were idiot enough to proceed

DJ,

It is illegal to drive too slow I believe..

You can get a ticket for unsafe driving speed by driving too slow as well as driving fast.

People that don't want to drive the speed limit should be curious to people that do.

I have been known to F*ck with people behind me if I am driving the speed limit or even 10mph over and they still want to tailgate me.

To me if they need to go faster than that it would be an emergency and they should have their flashers on.

I had a guy do the same thing to me a while back. He was driving slow and I was not tailgating, but I was 1 car length behind him...we were the only two on the one lane road so I guess to him it looked like I was tailgating..

I didnt even want to pass him as I was in no hurry...I was just cruising and chillin... all of the sudden he radically veers off of the road to let me pass...I was shocked... I slowed down cause I didnt know what he was doin...I thought well...whatever..and I passed him...he then sped up and tailgated me and started flashing his brights at me...I was thinking to myself..."What a complete Jackass!!!"

In Texas, it's pretty customary for people to pull off on the shoulder of the road to allow others to pass on two lane highways. Up here in Colorado, this seems to be unheard of and yes, it was definitely illegal for this doofus to be driving 40MPH in a 70MPH zone. There are minimum speed limits here. There are lots of rubberneckers here in the summertime. It's tourist season and "tourist harvesting" is discouraged in these parts since they provide the cashflow that keeps this town alive. Without the natural beauty and tourism it generates, the only reason to live here would be the small college here and the natural gas fields that start on the south side of the town and seem to go on forever. This place is wall-to-wall with people from all over the world right now driving around looking at everything but the road in front of them.
