I have finally got my new computer up and running and Paris 3.0 is up and running ROCK solid on windows 8.1 32 bit! This is the history of this journey. I had to call ID and talked to Adrian and requested a new response. He was a little busy, but he kept in contact with me via email, he needed some extra info. Windows version and a couple of other things. He got me a new working response within a few days. He did inform me that after January we Paris users are up the creek for any help. He recommended Ghost backing up of your hard drive. If you are patient and phone courteous Adrian will help you. As far as cutting us loose, that is another story. Is there a lawyer out there using Paris? You have to go to Id and get the current license support. Install the license support, install the drivers and 3.0 from Mikes' kit, launch paris, put in your new response, launch paris after reboot, Paris up and running on my windows 8 32 bit rig. That being said, I wish ID would do the right thing and let us have the pace free version after they totally drop the program. I understand they are into another field so why not let my paris go. As for Mike, HOLY COW where would we be without someone who understands Martian language. Kudos also have to be given to Chuck who threw Paris the first Life Jacket. I feel we ALL owe these guys all the support and any help they might need. I also got rid of all the aftermarket effects and I am going to load up on mikes effects. I seem not to any problems using Paris effects and can handle whatever I am trying to accomplish using the REAL thing effects. Mike gave me a good tip about loading effects. Sometimes when you get that sucky effects maxed out window, take out the effects and reload them in a different order and it seems to take them. I have no idea why, all I know it works and that is all I care about or understand. Thanks to Mike for all the work. One astatic Paris user, Rich
