That was probably rhetorical, but nope - still illegal.

I'd wager probably much more so now, given the tightening of software laws, with much higher fines and serious jail time on the table for distributing it. I very much doubt that ID is interested in pursuing people about it, but if it unlocks PACE-protected apps in general then PACE/Interlok sure might - and they aren't someone you'd want to mess with.

No...it's just a cracked .exe file for Paris, not a general Pace crack

It seems Edmund is thinking with his braincells on something new based on old Paris 3.0, since "There's new products coming "soon"", as allready showed up for over a half year without anything new happened at all at ID's "new" website, that's just a link to their old site from 2002;-)

They have something else in mind. This went up on the site within the last couple of months:

Look for the digital incarnation of the famous Marshall Time Modulator

One thing to remember, it wasn't just ID who owned the software. Even if ID wanted to give the app away (and I suspect they would) it's likely their lawyers would say they would have to clear that with whatever entity now owns the Imaginary Property that Ensoniq et al brought to the table.
