Do your own plumbing repairs,

orrrr

Get a root canal?

I'm wondering myself...

Had to beat the plumber out of a 400.00 repair by rebuilding the valves in the master shower.

Bought tools, made 2 trips to the hardware store for parts, sweated like a pig... 4 hours of work.

Nah, tools are like gear; the money for them does not get figgered into the project...

DC

that book is way better than the movie...

I always look for a way to do the job that requires a new tool. ;-)
The new front soffit bass trap grilles I am building for the studio required a new router lift for my table... It's saving me time in adjusting bit height, that saves money!! ;-)

Ok, so let's be honest, tools just rock...

Sooo, what is the coolest new tool you bought this year?

I got one of these.

http://www.leica-geosystems.com/cpd/en/ndef/lgs_31658.htm

Now I can walk in a building and go "yeah, that speaker throw is 224.45 feet!"

Works great in the studio too for getting speakers in the same plane and distance.

I love plumbing. Even if I suck at it.

The best tool I ever bought is a ten lb hammer. I took my house down to the studs, rafters and joists with it :-) Damn where is that freaking thing.....

That's funny. Did you use it to Fix Or Repair Daily?

Back at the turn of the century I bought a 90 year old 'fixer upper' in a historic district of DC. I spent about 8 months rehabbing it, and we moved in just in time for the birth of my son Gavan. Some of the old hands around here will remember my personal trail of tears :-)

Yes,

Ahhh the good old days. The house has a 1 bedroom rental unit in the basement, most of the places around here do. Unlike all the fiscally responsible in the hood, we use the apartment as additional living space. The only thing I had to do on that end was to re-open a doorway to the staircase.

Anyway...

Since it was an apartment, it has a separate meter, panel and phone. I was able to keep the server up and running in a closet, on DIALUP networking!, no matter what was going on upstairs.

I remember firing up the heating system for the first time. When I heard the sound of water cascading off the metal case of the netfinity server, I realized that I had forgotten to cap the supply and return for a radiator I had removed. Kept right on trucking. By the way, in a frenzy to get shit done, I hand carried the cast iron radiator down a flight of stairs. Something tore in my soul that day :-)

Yeah, I remember that... I wondered when you were sleeping, actually and how the heck you kept the biz, personal and NG server things running. Kudos my man.

Something

I just did something like this solo... moved a piano with a little 2'x 1.5' flat handless dolly.

That completely and totally sucked and I'm not entirely sure that it was my soul that tore, but I sure heard something rip (hack, cough)..dang I hate gettin older.

Something tore in my soul that day :-)

Chuck, don't you know you're not supposed to carry those down stairs - you're supposed to PUSH them! lol
