Any child can kick sandcastles over. Grownups make things.

Here's the address of the Wiki.

Here's the OS9 section. It looks pretty sparse.

Here's a section on PCs configs that needs fleshing out.

Who am I to request this? Nobody. Nobody has to do anything because I said so.

But now I've pointed it out, I'm sure everyone in the community will take note of where you now choose to invest your abundant remaining energies today - building things or breaking them.

Do it as penance, or because it's the right thing, or because the community needs it. But show us what you got that's good - not what you think someone else has that isn't.

Some of us are trying to build for the community here rather than tear it apart. Lead - follow - or get of the way.
