I was just looking at the Nuendo-post newsgroup and who should turn up there but Max Howarth.

The oldies of the NG will remember him...he had a few Paris setups in his production facility in Edinburgh I think writing jingles and posting commercial spots

Looks like he is Nuendo now....

Wondered where he got to....

I've chatted with Max via email a few times recently - seems like they are doing really well - pretty much the lead audio post facility in Scotland I believe. He's on the Nuendo forum quite often also. Derek and Brian T are also on the Nuendo forum. Good to see past Paris users around and about.

Was just wondering - every now & then one of the radio stations that I listen to will play one of their songs & I always notice how good the vocals sound (not just the performance thereof, but overall sound of the vocal track).

In fact, one day they played a LRB song, followed by "Midnight Train to Georgia", and I was thinking "DAMN, both those songs have great-sounding vocal tracks!", then they played another tune right afterwards that had actually quite a bit of distortion on the lead vox track... it was not a hard-rocker, it was a R&B-type tune - can't recall which one, now - and all I could wonder was how they let that go... was it the first performance, before they really got things dialed in & it turned out to be the singers best performance on that song? Was it a scratch track & the engineer just said f--k it, but they ended up using it as the real take? In either case, the mic was definitely a bit too hot going in, because on the louder vocal parts you'd hear it breaking up. Wish I could remember which song it is, because I know everyone's heard it. Sure didn't stop the song from becoming a hit, though.

My cohort here, Ed Stasium engineered Midnight train to Georgia. The gold record is on the wall in his studio. I never got around to asking him about his signal chain on that song.....think I will though. I like the LRB too.

You damn well BETTER ask him what Gladys used! Yeah, yeah, it's partly her voice, but it comes across so well in that tune. Find out - that is your mission.

Well, the Air Supply stuff you did sounded good, so I was just wondering. Certainly helps to have good singers, but part of the art is figuring out what works best for their voices!

I was fortunate enough to cut some vocals with Gladys for her #1 "Love Overboard" single (which won a Grammy for Best R&B Vocal Group in '88). She was one of the easiest singers to work with--a killer voice with killer control (not to mention a delight to work with, as were the Pips...), We used an AKG C24 into a Trident TSM Preamp and an 1176. She did know how to work a mic...:)

I have a gold record on my wall for that one, too... :)

So do you mean you recorded her voice in stereo, or did you just use one capsule of the c-24?
