I guess someone was bound to try it. Pretty neat.

Nice and promising but not quite:

Naturally I am a little prejudiced.

Yeah, baby, he's playing the blues. Very nice, indeed. I bought his first record but have not followed him since then. What is he doing these days?

Funky old Travis Bean, too.

He certainly fell off the radar. He lives in Arizona, does about 25-30 dates

At one point he was one of just a few people in the world that was allowed to go back and forth from the Carson Show to the Letterman show, he was headlining the biggest jazz festivals and concerts in the world and was one of the top to do other movies, but never did.

should make an effort to do so. He was never able to catch the full electricity he achieves live, on record.

The You Tube clip is from a good DVD:

I should call him.

He should make a live record - why don't you propose it to him. It's hard work to be a successful jazz artist, and doing 25-30 shows a year ain't gonna get it done unless you're a whole lot more famous than SJ. I hope he makes a comeback.
