I'm thinking about replacing tubes in various mic pres That I have. Looking to try different flavors of tubes. Looking for warm yet clean to pleasantly distorted when driven. However, I don't want to break the bank. I'm wondering if any of you guys would have any suggestions.

Thanks
James

Don't worry, everyone, it's just a diversion to make you think he's actually posting something along the lines of an audio topic... then when you least expect it, he'll turn it into a Mac-Pimping political thread.

Hi James,

<http://www.kcanostubes.com/content/contact.asp>

<http://www.kcanostubes.com/content/contact.asp>

Both these guys seem honest and knowledgable. I think they tend to deal w/ tube guitar amp types mostly, but they can probably help you...

Dear James Telefunken is the best to go !
Mostly there are 12AX7 or 12AT7 or 12AU7 used on mic preamps.
Although real telefunken are very expensive the sound is the best as it can get with tubes.
Regards,
Dimitrios

I have a pair of RCA 6072's I purchased from them (KCA) that seem to work well.
It's a crappy pre so tough to say how much they helped, they did bring down the gain which is what I wanted. I also purchased a GE five star 6072 from them for a microphone I no longer have. It does not seem to do justice in my 2247 though almost too warm and dark. I may sell it cheap or keep it to try in another mic someday. ANYway, KCA were good, they are more of a guitar amp place though
