

---

Subject: new plugs, mac, mike

Posted by chuck duffy on Wed, 17 Oct 2007 11:05:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Mike,

You have the fever. What you are describing is exactly what I went through a couple of years ago.

It took me over two years of searching, pleading and prying to get together the bits and pieces to be able to build these things.

Then a couple months figuring out the framework, and another month or so the ESP2 assembler. The fun really began when I started doing entire new control sets and uis to go with new plugs, sadly I was never able to release them. If we can figure out a way to get Bill Mauchly some revenue for everything he did for me/us, maybe I can pass them along and you can finish them off.

They don't need much work, and its a package of four really nice plugs, the highest quality algos and UIS possible for PARIS.

Anyways, keep it up dude.

On the Mac front, I was never able to get a mac build of anything, on any mac, or any version of code warrior, until Bill Mauchly mailed me an original Ensoniq PowerPC mac clone with the entire build environment intact, and a couple sample projects.

Please email me your address, it won't be immediate, cause I have to find the time, but I will give you this mac and ship it to you.

Chuck

---