I fought it for long enough, but now I've caved. I just went this week and dropped some dough on a 002rakfac package. Now I've got to get a machine to run it on. I'll keep the PARIS rig around to mix, but I figured if I want to stay in the game in Nashville, I need to have the PT skill set. Ya'll, please don't shun me. I feel so dirty.

The 002 is native. I may sound better than the TDM system. You could still use Paris for summing. I heard that someone, somewhere, is doing that.

Thanks for allowing me to hang around. Silly me, I just noticed I misspelled "Y'all". Even though I've been in the south all my life, "y'all" still seems kind of foreign, 'cause back home in east Tennessee, the word used more often is "you-ins".

Now back to putting up our goat barn...

"de rigneur" - I had to look that one up on dictionary .com. Once I figured out how it was spelled ;-), I learned something today. Now I can just go to bed.

That's funny.

I was just thinking today about various online postings by big city dorks, making fun of Paula Deen (Food Network) and Kellie Pickler (American Idol) as "putting on the cornpone", with the accent and the colloquialisms, the "mah mohma dun razed me reel guud" kinda thing, as if they were faking it.

I always shake my head that life-long Los Angeles/New York residents would say such stupid things: they obviously never taken a driving tour through the backroads of NC/SC/GA.....

Best tool for the job. I've switched to 85% Ableton Live 15% Other (mostly SX).

BTW all, I'll be doing an EM story about 64 bit processors, and if I find out anything interesting I'll let you know.
