

---

Subject: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by Bill L on Sun, 13 Jul 2008 14:20:34 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the funkier cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the strumming area.

For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him a long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player whose potential appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.

If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits") that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

---

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by Gantt Kushner on Sun, 13 Jul 2008 14:43:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Most jazz guitar players/students/fans know all about Wes but the average music fan might not realize just how deep and broad his musical experience was. He was The Man! That said, I'm convinced that George Benson is still one of the greatest living jazz guitar players. He can still do it all!

Gantt

Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

>Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but >listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the >funkiest cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right >hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also >gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the >strumming area.

>

>For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him a >long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player whose potential >appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.

>

>If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits") >that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

---

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?
Posted by TCB on Sun, 13 Jul 2008 15:26:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Wes was something else, for sure. On the jazz geetar front my faves are still Charlie Christian, Freddie Green (funky before the term existed), and Grant Green (no relation).

Also, another 'thumb only' guy is my fave blues player, Albert King. If I ever get serious about blues/jazz playing again I'll probably do the thumb thing. I'm OK at it now but not nearly as good as I am with a pick. And the thumb doesn't work with a power pop band.

TCB

Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

>Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but >listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the >funkiest cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right >hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also >gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the >strumming area.

>

>For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him a >long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player who's potential >appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.

>

>If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits") >that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?
Posted by steve the artguy on Mon, 14 Jul 2008 02:18:35 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Bill-

all you say is true. It all depends on what you mean by funk. Or rather "funk."

When I first read the subject line, the name that came to mind was Johnny Guitar Watson. That guy just oozed funk.

I'd also have to add anyone who James Brown hired. That's got to count for something.

If you twist the term "funk" far enough, you'd have to include Django, just for his sheer uniqueness. Well, maybe you wouldn't have to, but I might.

Just for sheer cussedness, I'd include Monk. Thelonius, not Wes's brother. Sure, TM was a piano player, but if Wes is funky, so was Thelonius.

Nowadays, I'd say it's Charlie Hunter. But what do I know?

Funk. What a concept. Originally it meant "smelly."

-steve the couldn't be mentioned in the same post with these guys guitar player

Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

>Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but >listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the >funkiest cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right >hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also >gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the >strumming area.

>

>For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him a >long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player who's potential >appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.

>

>If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits")

>that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by TCB on Mon, 14 Jul 2008 04:43:48 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

If we're getting away from jazz guys, we also need to include Leo Nocentelli, Catfish Collins, Nile Rodgers, Eddie Hazel, and Steve Cropper in the mix.

TCB

"steve the artguy" <artguy@somethingorother.net> wrote:

>

>Bill-

>

>all you say is true. It all depends on what you mean by funk. Or rather "funk."

>

>When I first read the subject line, the name that came to mind was Johnny >Guitar Watson. That guy just oozed funk.

>

>I'd also have to add anyone who James Brown hired. That's got to count for >something.

>

>If you twist the term "funk" far enough, you'd have to include Django, just >for his sheer uniqueness. Well, maybe you wouldn't have to, but I might.

>

>Just for sheer cussedness, I'd include Monk. Thelonius, not Wes's brother.

>Sure, TM was a piano player, but if Wes is funky, so was Thelonius.

>

>Nowadays, I'd say it's Charlie Hunter. But what do I know?

>

>Funk. What a concept. Originally it meant "smelly."

>

>-steve the couldn'tbementionedinthesamepostwiththese guys guitar player

>

>Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

>>Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but >>listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the >>funkiest cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right

>

>

>>hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also

>>gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the >>strumming area.

>>

>>For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him

a

>

>>long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player who's potential

>

>>appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.

>>

>>If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits")

>>that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

>

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by steve the artguy on Mon, 14 Jul 2008 18:34:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote:

>
>If we're getting away from jazz guys, we also need to include Leo Nocentelli, >Catfish Collins, Nile Rodgers, Eddie Hazel, and Steve Cropper in the mix.
>
>
>TCB

now I just have to find out who two of those guys are...

-steve the not-all-knowing

---

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?
Posted by Ed on Tue, 15 Jul 2008 15:28:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Funk = Smelly? Then that would have to be that guy on YouTube that is playing his acoustic with his feet! Absolutely FUNKY!!! I watch that and I am not sure to pity the guy, or praise him! Throw a few dollar bills at the monitor when he completes the song... lol.

"steve the artguy" <artguy@somethingrother.net> wrote:

>
>Bill-
>
>all you say is true. It all depends on what you mean by funk. Or rather "funk."
>
>When I first read the subject line, the name that came to mind was Johnny >Guitar Watson. That guy just oozed funk.
>
>I'd also have to add anyone who James Brown hired. That's got to count for >something.
>
>If you twist the term "funk" far enough, you'd have to include Django, just >for his sheer uniqueness. Well, maybe you wouldn't have to, but I might.
>
>Just for sheer cussedness, I'd include Monk. Thelonius, not Wes's brother.
>Sure, TM was a piano player, but if Wes is funky, so was Thelonius.
>
>Nowadays, I'd say it's Charlie Hunter. But what do I know?
>
>Funk. What a concept. Originally it meant "smelly."
>
>-steve the couldn'tbementionedinthesamepostwiththese guys guitar player
>
>Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

>>Many of us may not think of Wes Montgomery as a "funky" player, but >>listening to a bunch of his tracks today, I realized he was perhaps the
>
>>funkiest cat that ever strummed a guitar. His thumb-only (no pick) right
>
>>hand technique, which limited his lead runs to shorter phrases, also >>gave him some chops that I have never heard anyone equal in the >>strumming area.
>>
>>For those who don't know much about Wes, I highly recommend giving him
a
>
>>long listen. He was a truly unique and innovative player who's potential
>
>>appeal is much wider than the typical jazz artist.
>>
>>If you can find it there's a live cut of "Tequila" (one of his "hits") >>that scared me so much I dropped the tune from my solo repertoire.

>

---

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by TCB on Wed, 16 Jul 2008 18:57:52 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

"steve the artguy" <artguy@somethingrother.net> wrote:

>
>"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote:
>>
>>If we're getting away from jazz guys, we also need to include Leo Nocentelli, >>Catfish Collins, Nile Rodgers, Eddie Hazel, and Steve Cropper in the mix.
>>
>>
>>TCB
>
>now I just have to find out who two of those guys are...
>
>-steve the not-all-knowing

Leo = Meters

Catfish = JB band

Eddie = early Funkadelic

Leo still blows my mind with what he does, and it's not like he's a kid anymore.

TCB

---

---

Subject: Re: Funkiest guitar player ever?

Posted by steve the artguy on Fri, 18 Jul 2008 05:23:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote:

>

>"steve the artguy" <artguy@somethingorother.net> wrote:

>>

>>"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote:

>>>

>>>If we're getting away from jazz guys, we also need to include Leo Nocentelli, >>>Catfish Collins, Nile Rodgers, Eddie Hazel, and Steve Cropper in the mix.

>>>

>>>

>>>TCB

>>

>>now I just have to find out who two of those guys are...

>>

>>-steve the not-all-knowing

>

>Leo = Meters

>Catfish = JB band

>Eddie = early Funkadelic

>

>Leo still blows my mind with what he does, and it's not like he's a kid anymore.

>

>

I am feeling educated. I've heard those guys forever and just never knew who they were.

Thanks, Thad.

-steve

>TCB

>

---