This is the ultimate instrument. I don't care what the hell it costs
- I have to have one. I just mailed them a blank, signed check and told them to ship one.

I think the Oregon Trail Model 75 has more of a open top end with thicker mids than the 72. The Chicken Nuggett is has tubular overtones.

I have both of those models, plus the Butterscotch Quail.

While they're all great, I think the Butterscotch has the midrange up front without being too muddy kind of thing that makes it my go to Cowbell for all my cowbell tracks. Really cuts through the tracks!

I've had the Green Bean for a while. Give it a try, it cuts through a mix like a SBD in a small rehearsal room.

Probably a A-Desings Cowcifica, or a TAB-Funcowerks...
...or possibly even a Neve Porticow.
