as anything else (already are, but no sense in limiting what we already discuss :-)?

I agree this NG far exceeds others in terms of community. There may be more experiences (at least in my experience).

Great idea, besides I need all you guys around still as I am keeping Paris for a while and will undoubtedly have questions. I have really been enjoying the variety of discussion at GS.
We could do that sort of thing?

Re: Maybe refocus this NG???Dedric,

Do you think that refocusing the group, etc. will invite the same bunch = of wankers that hang on other groups to come here? Just a thought. I = think one reason there is such a great community here is the commonality = factor and I'm still able and willing to give Paris advice even though I = don't use the system andy more. We pretty much discourage the troll = community from hanging here primarily because the focus is on a DAW that = is exclusive to this community.

Now I'm off to try to get my friend's Digi 002/Macbook studio I'm been = working on up to speed. I should have sold him a Paris rig. All he does = is audio. No midi, no VSTi's..........hmmm..........I may be hanging out = on the FS site again soon.

.......but at Gearslutz, they don't have a separate forum for talking about the virtues of bathroom overspray whilst peeing standing up vs lowering the toilet seat and trying to hit the opposite wall by focusing the stream between the bowl and the seat vs just going outside and havin' a good satisfying whiz with you faithful hound. You can only get that here......fair & balanced.

We could always just call it the cheapbastardsthatrefusetoinvestinprotools newsgroup. :D

Because, basically, that's what it comes down to, innit?   lol

I mean, at this point there is absolutely no reason other than the cost to NOT use PTHD - it sounds just as good as anything else out there (of course, that wasn't the case prior to the HD series stuff).

I thought the same thing though, when Deej announced his "Crazy Doug's Liquidation Blowout" sale... it was like: "Well, there goes half the reasons to read the Paris NG anymore"   lol

There's already a gearslutz, there's already a Prosoundweb, now there's Mixerman's "womb"... I say leave this place be - it'll evolve on it's own. It's still the only place to get Paris help, a better place than the Swineberg forums to get Cubase help, and if another person or two here buys a Pulsar card, it'll probably end up being a better place than PlanetX to get Pulsar tips, too lol.

Ha...I'll try to actually type something this time.
To me, it's already OK for anyone here to talk pretty much about anything, audio related or not. I think this group is special, and WAY better than any other group I've taken part of.

Let's change the name to "We'll always have Paris". One day you'll realize the problems of a small news group like ours don't amount to a hill of beans in this world...

Mike,

Having read your post, and the others as of this time. I do see what you're saying, however...

Firstly, not that I consider myself in charge here (someone's in charge?!? ;o), but I'd like to point out that as far as I am concerned people on this newsgroup can discuss anything they like. I do prefer that we don't get overly swamped in politics on the main group for long periods, but only because multiple other users have stated concerns about this. Personally I think discussing politics is critically important to society, and isn't done enough. Arguably, if it was, the world would be a better place, though I seem to now be discussing politics, so I'll shut up. ;o) Point is, I consider this now to be a general purpose audio based (social?) group primarily for ex-Paris users. Other discussions are welcome also. It's almost a social club really, but like minded people obvious can help each other out.

I'm happy to change the group name or whatever if people think that will help, though I do kinda consider DJ's point to be relevant. If we actually "market" (not that I'd go marketing it) the group as a general audio group, perhaps we'll start attracting crowds we don't want.

Basically, I think everyone knows and accepts now that the scope of this group now is beyond Paris. There's simply not enough Paris users left to keep it going on their own. And if people wish to bring new users along to the group who will fit the mold, that's fine by me. I certainly wouldn't be in favour of any general purpose spamming / advertising in other places however, which may attract any random to come along. Word of mouth from users who know what we're about is, I think, the way to go.

As I said, if people want the name of the main group changed, that's fine by me, but ya know, I kinda feel like we're discussing the latest Quad processor servers on a forum called the Commodore 64 users group. It's kinda cool like that. It's our history. If we were to change the name I'd certainly want Paris to stay in there somewhere.

My $0.02...

Cheers,
Kim.

Hey Kim,
Thanks for your thoughtful reply, and all the others. I guess my thoughts were motivated by two things: I feel a little guilty when I post stuff that isn't really Paris related (though I know its very cool to do so... just old-brain guilt I guess), also I hate to see folks leave. I guess Henry's ciao kind of got to me!
Whatever the case, in the end, I was just wondering with no particular outcome in mind. When on the net, this is such a great place to hang out, thanks to YOU and all the other Paris-audio gals and gents.

Yep. I've made a lot of friends I've never met. And I'm not afraid to post my attempts at engineering, knowing that I'll get useful critiques and not blasted all to hell by self-righteous experts who know everything better than everyone.

This is a warm, cozy place. I know I'd miss the hell out of it if it went away, or turned into RAP.

I'm actually running Paris on a quad-6502 system, composed of 4 C=64's clustered together, all overclocked to hell with liquid nitrogen coolers and a 32-slot Magma chassis.. If I add 2 more, I can also run Dr. T's and sync it all up. You think Deej's Frankencomp is impressive? You should see the 8' rack of C=64's all cross-connected....

Well put, Kim, and thanks for your benevolent hosting!

We don't have to change the name, just what the acronym stands for.

Let's see, how about

People
Actually
Responding Intelligently
Sometimes

:^)
