Perhaps I'm just a big cry baby. ;o)

Maybe the problem in fact is that I'm simply not that good at music, comparatively, and I'm just one in the long line of artists and/or people in general who would love to make a living from their hobby but cannot. Perhaps I'm just miffed at the world because people have to do things which they don't like doing in order to make a living and make life liveable...

Maybe I'm just a self centred dreamer who thinks that we should all just be able to do what we feel like and not have to work so hard or worry so much. Perhaps I'm unrealistic and/or stupid. Perhaps my expectations were set too high because people used to make such a big deal of my musical talents from so young (and still do often) and hence I somehow just assumed it would all just somehow happen. Perhaps...

Maybe I'm just miffed because I'm broken hearted and writing depressing love songs which I personally find touching but which really don't mean much to anybody but me, but I'm blaming a failed music career for my unhappiness when it's really about a girl...

Maybe I should just calm down and shut up. ;o)

I dunno...

Cheers,
Kim.
