Aww, those things are only worth about $500 - I'll send you a check right away if you really need to part with it. :)

I knew I would get one of these. LOL.
As the first poster with this message, you are entitled to $100.00 off if you decide to actually get it.

Lessee, $100 off of $500 is $400 so, uh, I'll bid $401! When can I pick it up. ;^)

Found this on EBay.....

I think an opening asking price of $6k might have been a bit unrealistic though so it's not surprising that there were no bids.....

.....and this.....

Sometimes Ebay is a good indicator of aftermarket value. Then again, sometimes not....especially high end products. the kind of money that that thing is worth is a lot of scratch to hand over to someone you don't know for a product you haven't seen in person and tested. If I'm thinking about paying more than $2500.00 for a product on EBay. I'm also thinking of a plane ticket and rental car to wherever it is to test it and take delivery personally.

Neve 8816eh?. I've been thinking that if I don't get one of these , I will die.

When I was in Florida recently, I checked out an 8 core hot-rodded Mac Pro running DP out through a pair of Mytek 8X96s into an 8816 with a 5043 across the 2-bus (I brought the 5043). I went out of my way to hook up with this system because it is very close to what I have been planning. I should point out that the reference tracks I heard were exceptional recordings, but the long and short of it is that from the first few seconds I knew that if I don't get one of these setups, I will die. Not just the sound, but the overall power and feature set. It all worked very well and sounded quite exceptional. This was very reminiscent of my best experiences mixing on large classic Neve consoles, but with a little more punch and extended response. Not quite as friendly sounding as tracks coming off a 24/analog deck, but still quite wonderful. I used no plugins when auditioning the tracks. A second 8816 would make this pure heaven, but even with 16 channels the system was rocking. So much so, that I am willing to become an ex-owner of the worlds best effects processor. Assuming I get close to 6K for the 6K.

When I sold my M5000 I got almost what I paid for it new, 10 years later. You should hold it for a while if you want top dollar. ;-)
