Ah, then first one was a quick snap as the wind was blowing 30 MPH in my face - the second one wasn't all that bad though. Not as nice as yours, that's for sure.

When I was into photography years ago, I used to LOVE shooting landscapes... it was my favorite thing to take photos of - I think I was inspired by the shots of Ansel Adams to a degree.

Today at a gallery I saw an infrared black and white of Yosemite that looked an awful lot like an Ansel Adams. Had the same ethereal quality.

I wish I'd stopped in to see him when he hung out in Yosemite.

On the other hand, you should see some of the shots I've been taking in the hills around here lately.
