I have a laptop that I'm (sigh) forced to share with a couple of other people here at the studio. Problem is, I use this sucker for everything including financial stuff, which I'd like to keep private.

So, I've set up a user account without a password for the other guys.
Now I want to hide my E: drive from them, so they can only access C: and D:
I'd also like to stop them from using some programs, as some info will be viewable.

I right-clicked and went to "sharing and security" but the do not share box is greyed out in every instance.

What am I doing wrong? XP pro or Home?

You need pro to do file level security (kind of, home allows a little but not full control). Also need the drive formatted NTFS instead of FAT32. If it's not you'll have to convert it.

It's been quite a while since I've checked in here.
I'm glad to see the group is still alive and well.

Well, it is time for me to upgrade my studio machine so I did some searching for what to look for / avoid in modern motherboards.

I saw a discussion back in July initiated by Kim on whether PCI 2.3 slots would support an EDS card (5V supply was the unknown). However, there was no final conclusion.

I'm mainly considering an nForce4 based MB which nVidia claims is "5V tolerant". Has anyone been brave enough to try Paris on one of these motherboards?

If it matters, I was specifically looking at the Abit AN8 motherboard running an Athlon X2 processor.

Thanks!

-RohdeHi All

I received some wav files made in Nuendo and some of them are not displaying the waveforms in Paris

Any thoughts as to why this might be happening

Remember the Seinfeld episode where Kramer couldn't get any sleep because of the new chicken place across the street with it's flashing red-lit sign?

I imaginee it would be somewhat like that. lol

NeilCheck the properties of the files to see if they are Broadcast Wav's... if they are, stripwav won't help. You will need something like Wavelab to batch process the files from BW to PAF (or standard wav).

David.

But I'm beginning to realize, especially in the face of new, cool plugins that'll never work in Paris (like the Waves Transform Bundle, among others), that I'm eventually going to have to switch to something that actually has ongoing development and support.

So what are my fellow Mac DAW users finding satisfying after Paris? I own Digital Performer (w/ an old 2408) and Protools LE (w/ Digi 002). Neither seems as intuitive as Paris, but I suppose I'd get faster if I immersed myself in one or the other. My big concern is sound quality. I haven't found either DP or PT LE as satisfying to listen to and mix on as Paris. I know I've lost business for not being a Protools studio, but PT HD would cost a couple of arms and legs.

What to do?

GanttThanks again Jeff. Everything working fine now.
