I got a wild hair and thought I would do a quick reality-check marketing survey.

1. Would you be interested to visit a website where you could hear comparison audio samples of competing musical equipment products, for example: Guitar Modelers, Guitar Amps, Synthesizers, Instruments, Audio Effects Plugins, Synth Plugins?

2. If so, what types of products would you be most interested to hear compared?

Thanks!

You know the old saying, "From tiny acorns, mighty oaks grow."

My first idea was to compare guitar processors.

Yep! I would be interested in hearing guitar processors, mics, mic pres, mixers, compressors, EQs and plugins. I would also want to know all the settings. Bill, can you whip this up for me in the next day or two? ;)

Bill,

guitar speakers and tube guitar amps come to mind. check out the eminence.com website. If it's still there, they had audio samples of their different speaker lines that I thought was effective.

on the amp side, there's probably a market for comparing various Vox, Marshall, Fender, Peavey etc amp sounds in their dominant use - or at least clips of them. For example, I remember trying out an amp 10 years ago in a store that I think was a 4x10 Fender Blues Deville that was one of the coolest amp tones I'd ever heard. It was a store with a back room where I could close the back room door and just play. Often it's impossible to really listen to amps in stores though, and somebody running through sounds would be of benefit.
