So has anyone done a darn thing with all the goodies I posted, or does everyone have too much of a life to come up the year plus learning curve to create new paris effects :-)

I snarfed 'em the day you posted bro. I'm still designing my new desk, so my system is down but you can bet your sweet no limit I'll be installing the gamut the minute I have it all back together.

Seriously Chuck,
I gladly bought those bad boys when they came out and have used them all ever since. I did download the whole ubangy and loaded them into a local Paris user's comp=20 who isn't connected with the Newsgroup. He was overjoyed.

So a thank you from me on his behalf.
THANK YOU CHUCK !!! You always be da Man.

I think Chuck was getting not so much at the plugs, but at the development tools which were also posted which should allow any of us to create our own effects...

....if we have the tools upstairs. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

I am s-l-o-w-l-y developing but not enough to use them.

I should present them to my really smart friend though?!?!
He was interested in helping the bug fix cause when that was shot down technically.

I'm so slow,

T.

All Knowing,
Paris Chips are the same as the DP4+(Pro) or DP4?
Can patches from either unit be ported into Paris?

Chuck,

I'd love to get into programming and take the code files you posted and do further development. Right now, that's quite a way out. However, one of my session players (A Cubase guy) is into programming and he thinks Paris is pretty cool. Maybe I can get him to get me started on this. I was going to get more into learning guitar (again) after 10 years of learning to engineer, but programming plugins sounds liike fun.

;o)

Chuck,

If my brain was big enough, I'd be coding away. Unfortunately, I have what doctor's like to call a bit of an "intelligence" problem. ;>)

Seriously, if I had the time to learn, I'd be there, but life's in OD mode right now so . . . I'll happily be a beta tester though!!!

If all goes well, and please, I don't want to get your hopes up, but my comp guru is hard core genius programmer and comp-sci guy who claims that when he's feeling better - he's just going through pre-surgery chemo - he's going to re-write the asio and "might" tackle some other issues with paris, incl. plugins. he's a real a/v nut and is like family around here so I hope his recovery leads to good things for him and we get some of these dev's to materialize, cuz if anyone can do this, he's the guy.

let's all keep the faith for Adam Dickson in his time of need.

peace

I am sending your friend all my positive energy and hope that this will help at least a little.
No matter if he will develop Paris or not I hope a full recovery !!!

Patches can indeed be 'imported' from the DP PRO , but it is a tedious manual process. Matt craig did it for the reverbs he ported from the PRO, but never released.

<pre wrap="">If all goes well, and please, I don't want to get your hopes up, but my comp guru is hard core genius programmer and comp-sci guy who claims that when he's feeling better - he's just going through pre-surgery chemo - he's going to re-write the asio and "might" tackle some other issues with paris, incl. plugins. he's a real a/v nut and is like family around here so I hope his recovery leads to good things for him and we get some of these dev's to materialize, cuz if anyone can do this, he's the guy.

let's all keep the faith for Adam Dickson in his time of need.

peace
