Subject: ensoniq.ca is getting re-worked

Hi Everyone,

I had to upgrade the php version in my hosting package, and it completely broke the old web store. I've been chipping away at fixing it, but I'm ridiculously over-committed so it's taking some time.

I dropped the prices on a bunch of things because what seemed reasonable after having just spent a zillion hours working on the code didn't seem reasonable now. It was actually quite a walk down memory lane. I can't believe how long I've been working on this stuff.

If anyone needs something from the store right away, just send me an email.

I'm going to try to rework the site in the following ways:

- more prominent link to this forum.
- open downloads of older PARIS software, manuals, chucks plugs, Chris's driver, etc.
- a better look.

If you have any suggestions, I could use the help getting ideas together.

Cheers!

Mike

Hey Mike, one thing that might be helpful, would be to have links to some of the third party software that can be used with paris. A paris third party software resource page would be great. A lot of the links that were on the Parisfaqs site are broken and a lot of Paris info has gone missing. Just a thought.

You can always give the 3rd Party Software page on the Wiki a try - it's also user editable and help keeping it up-to-date is always gratefully received.

My pleasure! And if you notice a broken link and wind up tracking an item down at a new location, you'd be doing the community a solid by going back to that page after and editing the link...

The only other suggestion would be to have two bundles with all the plugins for sale in addition to the individual plugins. One bundle with your drivers and one without, just a thought.

Thanks for all your years of work mike!

Thanks so much, Excelav! I'll do it.

The site works again, and I've added a bunch of older downloads to the main page.

I haven't migrated the accounts yet, but it works, and I think it looks a lot better, too.

All the best,

Mike
