Maybe you could pass a law to make it illegal, and then it would simply stop happening! ;^)

OK, thanks Don. Here are some links for your consideration:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Friends_of_Science

Where "Friends of Science" is criticized for oil industry funding and scientific errors.

http://www.sourcewatch.org/index.php?title=Friends_of_Science

Details some of the industry connections.

<http://www.desmogblog.com/friends-of-science-friends-of-tobacco>

Criticized for their PR spin and connections with a similar campaign supporting big tobacco.

<http://www.desmogblog.com/friends-of-science-a-political-not-scientific-clique>

Criticized for lack of data and ignoring majority of climate scientists.

Finally, another Canadian perspective from the CBC:

No worries, you didn't waste my time. I didn't find FOS immediately convincing but it was interesting to learn more about them.

Does it bother you when other Canadians point out the special interest affiliations of FOS?

Are you curious about the lack of actual relevant data behind FOS claims?

Or the exaggeration of a supposed scientific opposition while ignoring mainstream science?

Or the spin and misdirection on their "myths/facts" page?

Setting aside the oil industry connections for now, and the appeal to authority they attempt to make, we can look at their "myths/facts" one at a time if you like. I glanced through them and most of them appear to be straw men arguments. A few are flat contradictions of the actual facts.

Seriously, in the context of what we do know, FOS isn't offering enough to hang a hat on.

Cheers,
-Jamie
