Hi all,

Haven't been around here much in the last year or so.
Glad to see that the Paris community is still alive and well.

Anyway, there's a guy on American Idol this year that I used to work with quite a bit. His name is Taylor Hicks. If you haven't seen it he's the grey haired guy. He's a very soulful singer with not an ounce of pretense. Check out his version of "Georgia on my Mind" at this link. It's a live recording. Don't know who the engineer was.
<http://taylorhicks2006.com/music.html#>

He also plays a mean blues harp.

peace,
T.Rossi

On a side note... I was flipping channels last night a saw a few minutes of the show... was it just me, or were those vocals pre-recorded (lip sync)? Sad....

David.

If you watch the whole show it's obvious that it is not lip sync'd. The performances are too raw for one thing. A lot of mistakes with mic technique where the audio and video agree, etc. Obvious nerves showing through in the performances. Compressors being nailed way too hard on occasion. A lot of things pointing to a live performance.

peace,
T.Rossi

That guy is a one of a kind.

I always enjoy what he does....which is his own thing.

I love this guy's feel/sound, he has been my favorit since the begining cause he really stands out and I hope the American public see's this.

My favorite, too.

T. Rossi, how is Taylor to work with? Nice enough fellow?

I worked with Taylor a lot during his time in Auburn(1997ish). He was very raw at the time. I ran sound for his band "Passing Through" quite a number of times. They were all very nice kids. Easy to work with. What struck me about them was that if I made a suggestion to help them sound better, they would do it.

Kids in the 18 to 21 age range usually are way too much into what THEY think to take suggestions from the sound guy. But they always listened and made adjustments then asked me what I thought about their adjustments.

As far as Taylor goes, for his harp, he had a little fender blues amp that he played through. Had his own mic that he ran into it and I just had to slap a 57 on it and we were ready to roll. For his vocals, I made sure I had the cleanest beta57 from the batch for him. One thing I remember was that he could KILL a sound board with his volume. I ran sound for a lot of bands back then and nobody hit a microphone as hard as he did. Not even close. Once he got warmed up and started really getting into it he almost didn't even need a mic. He's the kind of performer that needs to get into the groove before he really starts to shine. The thing about AI is that he doesn't have that time to get into the groove so his performances

so far have been a little stiff IMO. He does a lot of shouting whoo! and such on AI if you notice. He's just trying to get himself into it as quickly as possible.
When he's not into it he's just another guy with a good voice but once he gets rolling he can send shivers down your spine. Back then his mic technique was horrible so he tended to "bottom out" the microphone quite a bit. I talked a lot to other sound engineers in the area and we all agreed that if Taylor ever learned how to work
a microphone properly he would be dangerous.

From what I remember about him he was always a very polite guy. He seemed a little stand offish but that's because he was a bit shy. He always really got into what he was singing and came alive when he got on stage.
My impression was that he was a very genuine guy that truly enjoyed what he was doing. I'm glad to see that someone like him is getting a shot in this industry.

Did anybody listen to his version of "Georgia on my Mind" through the link that I posted? If so, what did you think? I think it blows away anything he or anybody else has done on AI.

peace,
T.Rossi

Congrats T! I don't follow the show but just read that your guy won.
Excellent.

Somehow Paris must have played a small part in his victory, right???

This was vary cool that a real guy won. At least this guy has his own original songs and has been working on his career for some time. I caught bits and pieces of the last 5 or 6 contestants, I think they were all good.

Congratulations!
