I don't have it up right now to see exactly what it was some kind of alert that pops up about some bad cue that it just won't let you go any further.

If you click on "OK" it just pops right back up again.

In the past I could never figure it out, so I would hit ok and instantly quit Paris before it would pop up again. Then create a new project and just drop and drag all the files into it. What a pain that is!

I have posted my grief here a couple of times before and most of you have seen this problem so many times that it becomes a broken record to you but none of the suggestions I got really ever did the trick.

Here's what works every time now: I hit "A" to bring up list of audio files and scroll down until I see some greyed out files that still have the green bars to the left of them I am guessing means they are still active, and just delete them. Man that felt good to com across this. It has plagued me since I bout this first Paris system in Wisconsin.

Cheers!

Steve
