Hey all, I just finished a piece on my new guitar. I did it as sort of a commemorative for my kid's karate teacher.

It has the Dojo Kun, or beliefs in Japanese on it. The Kanji was done by Sensei. It will probably be the subject of a piece in one of the guitar rags. More to follow.

Take a look

Thanks. I was so worried that he might not like it...

But he loved it, and didn't beat me up...

Nice guitar, but how do you reconcile all that zen-martial-arts spiritualism with your Christianity?

It's easy! There is no religion in MA's only philosophy. The empty cup of zen is simply learning to quiet the noise level in your mind.

They are very compatible.

Well, it murders my other guitars, dammit..

The hardtail bridge and the absence of the pickguard and middle pickup really woke up the tone. Very alive and vibrant, and a distorted sound that Billy Gibbons would love. Really toothy and powerful.

I love it!

Hey DC,
Wicked cool. May I ask who made the instrument? It looks like the body is two piece solid quilted maple. It looks great.

Thanks Mike. The body is quilted maple veneer over basswood.
I love the sound of basswood and the maple on top seems to make it even better. It has an ebony fingerboard.

I designed it and did much of the assembly and wiring. The body and neck are from USA Custom Guitar. The pickups are Tom Andersons.
The hardtail bridge is a Callaham baseplate with KTS Titanium saddles.

I have an article that is tentatively approved for one of the guitar mags.
I'll post the details when I know more.

I never thought about making another one. Hmm

Well it would take about 6 months, and probably cost about 2K, and then I would have to see if Sensei is willing to do Kanji on more of them.
