I caught some of it while I was waiting for yet another reconfiguration of my PC to happen - it's not bad, but what makes you say "next level"? The graphics & stuff like that?

Dunno, maybe you caught the only crappy part.

I saw part - sounded totally like she was singing to a track. Vocals were too clear, too precise, too much like they were sung into a LDC studio mic and not the handheld RF jobbie she was using. And again, all that movement and no extra breathiness.

But she does understand stage presence.

Never. Ever. not in this lifetime.

I'd rather watch a colonoscopy...

Let's make this clear - I only saw what I saw because my wife, who's a fan, was watching part of it as I was drifting off to sleep. I was not driving the remote control.

Nah. Let the laptop GPS software/receiver puck do that. It's my job to ignore the little voice and just keep driving.

You gave up the remote? I'll bet your one of those wimpy guys that gives up the map and asks for directions too!

I didn't see much of the NBC airing, but I caught part of this again on Bravo last night, and it wasn't bad at all! I saw maybe five songs total, and one that I would have to say for sure wasn't lip-sync'ed (I say this because she started out talking to the audience, and then when she started singing, there was no perceptible difference in her voice, plus you could tell she got a little short of breath in a couple of places) was "La Isla Bonita", and I found that interesting because that was the one that had the most energetic dancing in it out of bunch that I saw. The other songs I saw had less strenuous dancing & there was more processing on her voice in those - so whomever made the lip-sync comment, I couldn't really tell in those other songs.

I thought it was good! She did a nice job, and some of the dance moves were interesting - not just a lot of bump & grind & skipping around like she used to do when I'd see her videos (live cuts or otherwise) on MTV back in the day when they still played music on that channel lol.

I'll give the girl props... she's in great shape for her age, her voice sounded really good, & disciplined (whether she recorded some of it prior or not), and there was a lot going on visually - very different than your typical rock show with "light symphonies" & pyro (you know what I'm talking about, right? the kind of light shows where they feel they have to accentuate every note with the lights ALL CONCERT LONG).

I'm watchin this again from download.... for the 5th time.

I've always watched any type of major production concert simply for education of what people are doing for shows and I'm still impressed with this. I'm serious, its high quality.
