I agree. that's why I think this war is being mishandled. First thing we should have done was seal the Iraqi borders. That would have taken a huge effort and required sacrifice.....but this thing might be pretty much over by now if we had done that.

Hell yes, we're in a war and it does take funding from other places. This cute little graph you show could likely be used to show the same thing done by other presidents for New Orleans or any number of other things. Let's create a graph to see how many times Clinton made an effective move to proactively protect this country from terrorist threats while we're at it. The graph would never show a spike. Perhaps he could get Mark Rich to donate a couple of the mone that he made brokering oil deals for Sadaam during the thime the UN had him under sanction.

(quote from AP article in the King county Journal on Sept 1)

A senior Corps commander discounted the notion the disaster could have been averted by full funding of projects such as new and beefed up levees to protect against hurricane surges from Lake Pontchartrain and improving pumping and drainage capacity in New Orleans.

"These (projects) were not funded at the full ability of the Corps of Engineers to execute the project," said Lt. Gen. Carl Strock, commander of the Army Corps of Engineers. "But the important question is, 'Would that have made a difference?' And my assessment is, no, it would not."

But Strock did acknowledge that more funding for the Southeast Louisiana

Flood Control Project would allow the Corps to more quickly pump out the floodwaters inundating New Orleans.

"Had we had the SELA project finished ... we could more efficiently move the water out of the system because it's a big drainage project," Strock said.

Other presidents also have taken aim at the Corps' budget. President Carter's first veto came against a big water projects bill passed by a Democratic-dominated Congress. And President Clinton squeezed the Corps budget as well. Doing so frees money for other White House priorities.

"I fought every ... administration when they tried to use the Corps of Engineers as a piggy bank to pay for other projects," said former House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, a Louisiana Republican who represented the New Orleans suburbs for more than 20 years. "I had major battles with the Clinton administration."

"Going back to Carter. They've all sought to draw down the Corps of Engineers and put it elsewhere," he said.

Hybrids seem to be a stop-gap solution to me, not longterm, but I'm up for anything that doesn't use gas at this point.

Any relief program under any president would be overwhelmed by this. (and BTW, I can't stand Bush)
New Orleans is a geographical and logistical nightmare in any scenario. Three main highways access it, two are down.
Large population of poor folks, most of who happen to be black, making it all too easy for commentators to play the race card.
Lots of addicts who didn't leave and decided to play "Escape From New York."
Hell, where's Snake Pliskin when we need him?

Anyway, none of this is constructive....

....as far as bein' "fugly," as Dabney Coleman says in Modern Problems, "I'm a damn good lookin' man!" and I have probably gotten laid in New Orleans more than you have.

nanner nanner nanner!

;0)I would appreciate it dude if you could not use profanity to insult NG participants, especially in the subject line. I can undestand getting worked up and all, and I think it's good to be passionate about your views, but I think we need to show some respect and keep things civil.

Where possible I'd also prefer we kept political stuff on the General group. I understand topics can drift though...

Cheers,
Kim.

Calling forum participants names, calling anyone a racist, and profanity are completely useless. I really don't care how much you hate any given president, some of the stuff that has been posted here is just slanderous mudslinging. IMHO, that removes any credibility you have in an otherwise respectful debate. If you have to slam people and align yourself with a rather poorly outspoken, ill-informed grandstanding rapper to make your point, you are probably better off keeping your opinions to yourself. None of this serves any constructive purpose.

Respect others, or no one will want to respect you.

Regards,

DedricNo, you replied with hate. Go back, reread your posts.
