This is old, old, old Jef. Also, totally contrary to any experience I've had with the numerous Macs I've owned. Actually, some of the things he talks about I've only experienced on my PC's! The PC I'm typing this on right now absolutely refuses to shut down. The screen comes up saying it's shutting down, but days later it's still hasn't shut down. Anyone have any ideas on this?

You are probably set up as "standard pc" instead of ACPI... this also affects shut-down.

David.

How do I change this? Remember to talk slow and use detail if I have to go into the Bios or do anything complicated to fix this. I'm a Mac guy at heart and digging around in the bowels of a PC is scary for me. ;>)

The weird thing is, it just started doing this a few months ago. Before that, it shut down fine.

Don't recall for sure. It may have been close to doing a McAfee scan and cleaning of viri though. Can't directly relate it to that though.

Kill hibernate/sleep/standby/power saving stuff.
Right click on the desktop, Select properties, go to the screen saver tab.
Power schemes tab: System standby = never Advanced tab: When I press the power button=Shut Down
Hibernate = unchecked

It was a clever parody of those old Mac commercials. The part about the dock was true. My solution was to just hide the damn thing. At least that way it only pops up when I push the cursor clear to the bottom of the monitor.
Anyway, they did do a good job with the parody.

The parody part of the video is Ok, what's not Ok is the untruths it spreads. It's ignorant, non mac users are left believing this stuff. Example, he states that he copies files from a CD to the desk top, then they vanish when he ejects the CD. It is ignorance of how a mac works, a Mac works differently than a PC! It's a false statement, he says he copies the files to the desk top, on a Mac that just creates a short cut to the file, this is so you don't create a redundant copy on your HD. A Mac user knows you need to drag/copy the files to any other folder other than the desk top, if you want to copy them. This would be user error/ignorance.

He says that when you delete a file, it's gone forever! Ah, yes, that is the purpose of deleting a file! On a Mac it's called a trash can not a recycling bin. That's why a Mac will prompt you with a message that asks you if your sure you want to delete the file, because it will be deleted forever! When you want something deleted, you want something deleted! Well the truth is on a Mac the first binary is switched off so you can't see the file, but it's still there, until you write more data to the HD. At any time the old file can be written over and the file can be lost forever. In most cases the files can be recovered if you don't let too much time pass. The idea is that it is a more efficient use of HD space. When you delete something on the Mac it reallocates the HD space back for use.

In both cases, it is ignorance of how a Mac works. He blames the Mac for being stupid. Non Mac users are left believing that the Mac is flawed, when in fact it is the non Mac user in the video that is flawed.

It is misuse of the product, misinformation and untruths. I'll give my over exaggerated example. It would be like saying, this hammer isn't vary good at chopping down trees, look at how stupid this thing is!

I understand the video is comedy, but it unfairly pokes at Macs and Mac users with untruths.
