Price dropped about in half, too.

Must go read more...

Here is the spec page: <http://www.apple.com/logicstudio/logicpro/specs.html>

LaMont is not gonna be happy, it says: "Internal audio resolution: 32-bit floating point; 64-bit precision where required"

Looks cool so far, still reading up on it.

The comping is slick, but I don't know how revolutionary it is; ) looks a lot like free form mode in Paris. It's all slick and looks easy to use, and no more dongle!

Looks cool as well. I think the reason for the 32 bit stuff is due to OX-X 64 bit is not ready.

-Audio editing, big improvement.
-Still same looking Mixer, but not a deal breaker..

This version of Logic 8 looks to be an interim release.

Logic pro 8 with Soundtrack pro 2, Studio Instruments, MainStage live virtual instruments, Studio Sound Library, and Studio Effects with space designer and Mastering Tool, it's a hell of a buy at $499.00. I would say that price helps offset the price of a new Mac. That's one more reason to buy a Mac!

Oh come on DJ, you know deep down in side your heart, your lusting for a 3.0GHz know your fear is simplicity, give in to the force, it will be Ok. You could still run Cubase and Windoze.

If you went the Apogee rout you would have all that hot rod power for plugins. If you don't get this set up you could.....well you know.

P.S. That price would have been 1997, 1987 you could add two more zeros.

I think the only stand alone program is Soundtrack pro 2, the rest are integrated.

You can import export, and drag and drop multi track audio between the two programs. With dual monitors and program switching it shouldn't be a problem. I'm glad they included Soundtrack pro 2.

Speaking of Apple prices, their monitor prices are outrageous. People in the Mac community are getting noisy, I think Apple will be dropping prices by January MacWorld. Dell is killing them on price and quality right now.

Now Dave, you know you can get a new Mac that will run Logic Studio Pro 8 for $599.00; )

Hi James,
He can run Cubase just fine on the Mac side too. :)

Logic 8 is one of the main reasons I pushed to have us become Apple dealers awhile ago.
Was kinda hoping thought that Apple would come up with new ideas in Logic 8 instead of just fine tuning everybody else's ideas. But is still looks great and is a big improvement over the old versions.

If DJ is gonna buy a Mac it's gonna be from me or hes a dead man!!!
Plus our pricing is way better anyways.

Chris

Hi James,

Yep for sure Dell is not anymore competitive than Apple for the same specs. I've already had a Dell precision 690 hear to troubleshoot for some audio compatibility issues and they are not at all higher quality and the Mac. I don't even bother selling the PC Xeons at this point. They are working great for Video stuff like Premiere and Vegas but the audio software and hardware is having tough time. At this point if someone really wants a 8 core machine I would only point them to a Mac Pro. That being said if the AMD gets there shot together on the PC they have a chance to get back some of that the high end workstation/server market. They still have a better buss design than Intel for the Multi CPU based systems.

Here are 3 systems from today.

Dell - $4160.00 (The Dell configuration is not capable of letting you choose the right number CPUs to do the quad 3.0ghz) According to their web site add $1000 for one Quad 3.0ghz CPU so the price goes up to more than 5160.00 but you only get one Quad core CPU. It will be at least another $500 minimum to really have a 3.0 ghz 8 core machine. The video card is crap and will have limits to what size and type of monitors you can use.

My System Details

128MB PCIe x16 nVidia Quadro NVS 285, Dual DVI or Dual VGA Capable

4GB, DDR2 SDRAM FBD Memory, 667MHz, ECC (4 DIMMS)

C2 All SATA drives, Non-RAID, 3 drive total configuration

SATA/SAS Integrated Card - For Connecting Internal Hard Drives

Free 19 inch E198WFP Flat Panel

My Accessories

USB Entry Quietkey, No Hot Keys

Dell USB 2-Button Mechanical Mouse with Scroll

No Floppy Drive

No Speaker option

My Software

No Resource CD

My Services & Warranties

Like you need all that...

I built MY Mac out of a pile of sand and some used pop cans.

Then I reinvented the internet, downloaded the free Mac development tools, wrote my own version of OSX, and compiled all my software.

Once I had the email program working, I immediately started complaining about the cost to every news group I could think of.

THAT'S how you build a Mac! :^)

Cheers,

I am humbled and in awe. That is sooo cool!!!!. I I guess now I'm going to have to go out and mine a bunch of iron ore, nickel and chromium, build a foundry, use the foundry to create steel, use the steel to build a drilling rig, and drill my own oil well, then use some more steel to create an oil refinery, use the refinery to make plastic,. Then mine some more copper for the wiring and crunch up some sand fro the silicone and make a iant wafer about 10 ft. across and pur 500 trillion transistors on it, then I'll steal your code and start marketing "my Mac".
