The best Steve Miller album, IMO, was his LP called Sailor when Boz Skaggs was a member of the band. I think my favorite Steve Miller song is Dime A Dance Romance and that was written by Boz Skaggs. The words are pretty unintelligible, but there is enough nuance in them to paint an alluring mental image of a debauch in a waterfront bar....sort of a Louie Louie kinda' thing. There were also a couple of rockers on some other albums of that era..one song called Steppin Stone and another that I can't remember.

Fly like an Eagle???.....the only great thing about that album, IMO, was that it was recorded in his garage on a TEAC 80-80 (or so the legend goes). The Joker was a joke.....bleecccchhh!!!!

As far as cracker bands are concerned, I never thought that of Boston.....but then again, I really never gave it any thought. I was so friggin glad to be hearing anything but disco that it worked for me at the time. I was a big Little Feat fan back then.

I'm gonna go down to a bar here in Durango called Scootin' blues tonight. The town is full of a bunch of middle aged white guys and gals (damn!!!..I just can't quit sayin' "gals", can I?) who are dressed in leathers and are pretending to be real bikers. It's soooooo funny to watch them try to look cool and hip and strut their stuff. Maybe the band will cover some Boston tunes. Nothin funnier than watching old white people dance.

I always liked the way Delf's voice morphed into guitar feedback at the beginning of the lead solo in More than A Feeling.

One of my all time favorite bands live, as well. Those guys could rock the house/arena/earth. I was devastated when Lowell died. You know how some people are diehard Deadheads????.....I was a Feathead.

Just random observations. The construction guys renovating our offices had the local classic rock station on. Haven't listened to anything like that in years.

- Peral Jam is by far the most boring band to come out of Seattle in the 90's, but the only one who can get on a classic rock station, so they made most of the money. The Screaming Trees, Alice in CHains, Mudhoney, Soundgarden, and half a dozen others were better bands with better songs but don't fit the format.

- Eddie Van Halen on their first record was a staggeringly good but also tasteful guitar player. And there's something just joyful about the way he played back then. It was lost as time went on but he's a pleasure to listen to from that era.

- Angus Young has some devastating vibrato.

- There's nothing in this world short of a trailer truck of Saltines or Randy Travis that positively screams CRACKER quite as loudly as More Than A Feeling by Boston. There's no sheet music for that song 'cuase it's so white the notes are unreadable.

- I will never get why the Steve Miller Band is so popular.

- If any band can give Van Halen a run for their money in the 'We didn't used to suck but boy to we now' category it would be ZZ Top.

Said the white boy...

heh heh

Sorry couldn't resist...

I wish classic rock would all go to the bottom of the deep blue sea...

Then radio would have to come up with new music to play,
and hey, people would even write more new music!

Wow, it would be like a whole MOVEMENT or something...

Nah... just a dream

ZZTop sucks now because of their own dumb choices of style. Eddie has been ravaged by alcohol and just can't play.

Billy Gibbons is still amazing like Angus Young but his taste has gone from genius (Deguello, Rhythmeen) to crap (Mescalero, XXX).

I'm most certainly white but I ain't no cracker.

It was actually interesting to listen to all of the 70's and 80's era recordings, even just on a boom box through a sheet of drywall. The older the tracks get the less busy they sound (in general of course, the Queen and Boston tracks are thick as molasses), but they definitely have some balls that is lacking in the newer recordings. I don't think that technology, I think it's style. Still, fun to hear. Now back to your regularly scheduled electronica programming.

Opinions? Sure, I'm crawlin' with 'em over here:

I am so with you on Steve Miller, in fact, I would disagree with you on one point . . . I think Steve Miller Band screams CRACKER way louder than Boston. I had just moved my band to Portland in late '73 and the local stations were playing "The Joker" so often that my gag reflex barely had a chance to relax from the last play when they'd play it again. Unfortunately, I think I do understand the appeal . . . it's predictable it's easy listening with a rock drumbeat. It is to music what McDonalds is to food. It's sweet, fatty, salty, and soft enough not to require much chewing. The motto of the American consumer is "Please, Don't Make Me Think!" (Politicians know this and use it continuously, but that's another discussion)

Not to solo out Steve Miller -- this appeal to the lowest common denominator seems to be true of most popular music, whether it's Classic Rock or the latest in Hippity Hop. How often does something truly creative, unique, or even interesting break through on the airwaves?

Love AC/DC in their Bon Scott period ("Highway to Hell" is in my top ten rock songs of all time). AC/DC with Brian what's-his-name . . . not so interesting. He's a good screamer, but not much character.

Similarly, I liked Van Halen with Dave Lee Roth. Hot music, very interesting vocals. Sammy Hagar . . . ? YAWN!

I think a lot of great bands deteriorate into boring parodies of themselves after achieving worldwide success and wealth. I think it's one of the hazards of getting rich off of one's art.

One of my favorite bands of the '70s was Alice Cooper, in fact I still listen to the albums "Love It To Death" and "Killer" on occasion. After the success of "School's Out" and "Billion Dollar Babies," Alice lost his original band and with them a lot of important creative input. Being an entertainer became way more important than making good music, so Alice hung out with Liza Minnelli and golfed with Bob Hope and "went Hollywood." YAWN!

I do think things got interesting for a while in the nineties when Nirvana broke the spell of spandex, big hair, and lipstick, but now things have settled back down into layers of homogenized fluff. There's lots of great music out there, just don't expect to hear much of it on the radio.

I'm 47 and still don't know what a cracker is but I love Boston, Queen, ZZTop, The Outfield, Air Supply, Led Zeppelin, Rush, AC/DC and Shania.

I must be one...hehe

One of the best concerts I ever saw in my life was ZZ top in 1971 in the football stadium at Stephen F. Austin University in Nacogdoches Texas. I was flabbergasted. The only other time I had seen guitar playing like that had been at a Hendrix concert back in the late summer of 1970, right before he died.

Billy Gibbons can really play some incredible stuff. I really don't like stylistic direction he and the band eventually took. By 1974, they weren't innovative any more. It was all this "formula/Texas Hype" and it got really old and stupid. I was at their Barndance and Bar B Q concert in Memorial Stadium in Austin in the summer of '74. 80,000 people sitting on concrete bleachers and astroturf stoned and drunk out of their minds in the middle of July with very limited water supplies and bags of Reddi Ice being sold by the promoters for $10.00+ per. When the sun went down, people were so crazed from the drugs and the heat that they started lighting fires on the Astroturf. UT didn't allow another concert in that stadium for 25 years.

Bad Company (with Jimmy Paige sitting in) opened the concert, followed by Santana. ZZ top showed up after that and they were just "loud" and mediocre by comparison, wearing these white Gene Autry costumes with oversized 20 gallon hats. I thought I was hallucinating.....well....more than usual. Santana, OTOH, just stole the show. I went out and bought Borboletta the next day.

OK.....rant off..

Cracker = pejorative term for white people. As in 'He's such a cracker he thinks James Brown was a running back and Bootsy Collins is a drink.'

Whether you are one or not, I defer to the famous Warren Buffet line, 'If you sit down at the poker table and after 30 minutes don't know who the patsy is, you're the patsy.'

Now then, I'm really not trying to be divisive here. If people like More Than a Feeling or think it's not treasonous to out a covert CIA agent that's OK. We agree to disagree. But doesn't Boston seem a bit, I guess 'contrived' is the best word? And I don't mean 'predictable' or 'well executed,' I like music made by machines after all. But doesn't More Than a Feeling actually have Less Than a Feeling because it's trying so very hard to have Feeling but ends up so buffed and perfect it's antiseptic?

I actually admire Scholtz for a number of reasons. He sued his sweat shop record label (with money made from his electronics) and won. He designed some really cool guitar gear, I still wish I had my Rockman chorus module. Also, as you say, a bright and thoughtful guy when interviewed. But I just can't hang with the music.

Unrelated question, Don. As a guitar geek. My Fulltone OCD was stolen at a gig recently. I'm playing these days through a two amp rig, a Top Hat AC-15 knockoff with a power soak on it and a Savage Macht 6. I've kind of decided the OCD was a little too pretty for me. Great pedal but just not enough grit. I'm thinking of a Fulltone 70 pedal or a Soul Bender, so more of a true fuzz sound than an overdrive. Good idea? Bad idea? Alternative idea?

Then you probably don't like works of art such as Michelangelo's sculptures, either, right? Too perfect & well-executed, after all.

I listen to Kraftwerk (a lot) so I don't have a problem with perfect and well executed music. I also like David paintings and Philip Larkin verse and Greek terra cotta, all of which are almost perfectly executed. My point is that Boston, to me and me only, sounds well executed to be sure, but to me also phony and contrived. There's no airs put on by Hendrix, you can hear the sweat and craziness and dirt all over the place. Again, just for me, not trying to cause problems, Boston sounds like it's really trying to have feeling, emotion, and balls but just doesn't.

I agree that Boston is almost "midilike" in their production. It's something I can hear about once or twice a year and think "OK..that's really well played...now let's move on". It's not what I think of when I think of rock 'n roll.

.....when I think of Rock 'n roll, I think of Sam Kiniston's video of "Wild Thing". Three chords and an orgasm. It is the pure and quintessential essence of the art form, IMO.

I guess I view stuff like Boston, Steely Dan, Toy Matinee, etc., as skillfully-crafted works - they're deliberate in so many aspects, and it's that which takes you to where they want you to go... I mean, there's a whole world in Aja - just listen to it open-mindedly sometime. Same goes for the first Boston album (sorry, I don't even give them a pass on "Don't Look Back" - it's ok, but nothing like the first one).

If guys like Fagen & Scholz would've wanted to produce raw emotion & slightly out-of-tune chording, they certainly could have. Scholz's problem is that he couldn't sustain the vision very long.

You would think since everyone recognizes that Aja is a masterpiece that Steely Dan would have created more music with heavy studio chops and extended instrumental instead of the much less interesting stuff like their latest couple. it seems like such a no brainer but they missed it.

Sorry about the theft. Your music seems really chord-driven rather than lead-guitar driven and I think a fuzz-type pedal might mush out pretty quick. For more grind without mush, I like the Barber Direct Drive.

<http://www.barberelectronics.com/directdrive.htm>

Yeah, they talk a lot about "vintage" this and that but the pedal has a good grind to it.

See if there is somewhere you can try one out.

Also, I have heard that the Foxrox ZIM is great and you can swap cards out to get what you want.

<http://www.foxroxelectronics.com/>

And there may be a fuzz that does just what you want that I have not heard.

I have one of these:

<http://www.tone-man.com/rangemaster.htm>

on order, and I can't wait to hear what all those germanium overtones do in front of my Direct Drive.

More to follow.

How's the band doing?

To me, buffed and perfect can be bitchin' as hell. I mean look how well Bach did it. But then I always did like classically influenced rock, and I fuggin' love the way Boston turns their song "Smokin" into Bach's Tocatta and Fugue in D Minor in the middle. It still knocks me out after all these years.

But I also love the Ramones.

Hey Don,

Thanks for the tips. The first Monkees record (the one you've heard) I barely played on. A track here and there. It was pretty much done by Nick and Russell, and they brought me in when they decided they wanted to play on stage. So I've added a more sleaze and lead to the band, which Nick in particular has been enjoying. I'm also adding feedback parts and ebow things and slide bits and capoed open tuning and all manner of stuff.

The other guitar player in my band uses the Barber pedal you describe, and it sounds great on his (very clean) silver Fender Bassman, but my 'base' sound is pretty gritty to start with and the Barber doesn't sound nearly as good. The Foxrox looks interesting, though they don't have the fuzz cards I'd be interested in done yet. I've played my last TS-9, or clone there of!

Anyway, thanks, I'll check out the Foxrox,

Hmm . . . I'm guessing here . . . in a straightjacket? I'm much better with Beatles trivia. :)

Everybody has an opinion, so I'll give mine too. Most classic rock is old, tired, and over played, however I still love a lot of it. For me it's mood music. When I'm in the mood I can really dig it, it takes me back. When I'm not in the mood, I can hardly stand it. One thing I really like about classic rock is, it was real musicianship.

The band Boston took rock to a new level at the time. The songs, the playing, the sound, the production and the way that music was recorded were all notable at the time. Rockin' organ, Boston's incorporation of the Hammond B3 organ in rock at the time was also notable. Also, the concepts and the art work on the album covers for Boston and Steve Miller were exceptional at the time. I think Boston really did want to take us to a new place musically.

If you don't care for Boston or Steve Miller that's cool. If you think that they have been over played, that they had their fair time on the radio and should move over for new music, that is Ok too.

The term "CRACKER" has many meanings, but in this case it is derogative. It is a anti white slur, that is black slang for stupid, unintelligent, dimwitted white people. It is similar to calling somebody a stupid redneck. In this case it is a slam on the music and anybody that would like it, or listen to this music, which would be quite a few of us here.

The foxrox pedal is really cool, but they don't have the fuzz cards ready yet. Bummer. If I could get one germanium and one silicon fuzz (the first for fuzz and the second for freakout) I bet that would be a killer.

One of the reasons I'm doing this (besides the theft) is that I want more nastiness in my sounds. I sound like a former professional blues/jazz guitar player playing in a punky power pop band, 'cause that's what I am. In fact, that's a general problem with the Monx. My guitars sound too nice, my mixes sound too nice, my soft panned backing vox sound too nice, etc. and so on.

Maybe I'll just get a used Fulltone '69 pedal and a new '70 pedal. That should do the trick nicely.

Over the weekend I got to see some classic rock acts for free at a festival. I saw Mark Farner, he was good. Blue Oyster Cult they were Ok, and Paul Rogers. Paul Rogers was great! He still has a great voice, and the band was tight. I also saw Puddle of Mud, and they were good as well.

The week before I was dragged to a Ted Nugent show, they sure rocked it for a three piece band. It was a freebie, so I went. A few years ago I saw him and I have to say he had the worst sound I had ever heard, bar none. This time the sound was Ok.

These guys still draw big crowds here in Detroit, I'm sure in other parts of the country they wouldn't draw flies.

Hmmm.... classic rock.....hmmm.... For me, it was from the last half of the fifties with people like Little Richard, Buddy Holly, Eddie Cochran, Ritchie Valens, Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis. For me, with my age, that's the reall classic rock n' roll;-)

I think it's coming down to that one or the retroman sybil. Both seem pretty cool, though the sybil might be just a bit more insane because the two fuzzes can be run in series. That sounds like fun.

One thing I worry about, all of the pedals brag about how good they sound with a clean amp. Well, my amps are anything but clean.

Here's hoping, seriously. they use to play at the grande ballroom and they'd be in summer dresses...a little too low cut for my tastes though.

yup. Before Zappa picked them up and through the first album. I've got a picture from high school somewhere of them all normal and in lettermen's jackets. How odd that looks
