Roumor around boston is that our good friend and Paris user Phil Alken had a couple of unexpected guests drop in on one of his gigs in Cambridge MA last week. Phil, plays in a band called Crown Victoria, featuring Buffalo Tom front man Bill Janovitz. Last week one MR Theo Epstein and his good friend Eddie dropped in, I guess this Theo dude happens to be the GM for the Boston Red sox (ya know the guy who built the World Series winning team), well he had just been at his buddy Eddie's band's gig, and they were looking to continue the rocking out, So I guess this guy Eddie jumped up on stage with Crown Vic, normally not a good sign, but when Eddie happens to have the last name Vetter, and his band is called Pearl Jam, then I guess you have to cooperate.

Anyway, unfortunately this is one of the few Phil gigs I missed, but Phil is not one to talk himself up, but I hope he comes in here and elaborates. Phil did tell me Eddie was actually really good.

By the way, besides Phil's new Solo CD, I think he is performing on baseball writer Peter Gammons charity project.

Phil rules!

P.S.. I get to record one of his other bands next week!
