Has anybody tried one of these? The price is right, I wonder how they sound.

They are great on fiddles and work well on guitar cabs. Too dark for the vocalists that I tried it with, but for the right instrument, they work very well and have that nice smooth ribbon kinda' top end.

Hi James I purchased one. Great deal. Very nice mic. Very Warm. I purchased it for my Partner(Singer/Writer) which he requires a C-12 ish warmth.. We searched and sought advice, and from one of engineering mentors, stated that Dre needed a Ribbon mic, and suggested that we get the NADY.

Best buy in 10 years..We getting a few more for amps and backup..Their are now $79.00

OK, let me go on record & say that this has to be the first time I've ever heard a C-12 referred to as a "warm" mic.

I thought " warm " was usually an indication of a boost in the low mids.does the C12 have that in its response curve?

I love AKG mics I like the response of the C414 B ULS on male vocals.brings out a kind of raspiness for lack of a better description.

I wish I had a C12 .have a C414 and a C3000. that's it.

anyway that RSM-4 looks like a great buy for $70.00

at that price you cant go wrong .thanks for the heads up on that Lamont

The Akg C-12 VR is not warm to you? it's not bright or wide open and the 414..

Well, at least the 2 C12'sVrs (non vintage) are very warm. Man, I love that mic..

I've not used the VR, but I've used an original vintage C12 before, and the precursor to the VR, the one they called simply: "The Tube" - I hear the VR sounds better than "The Tube", but apart from that, I found both the original C12 and Da ToOb to be pretty bright mics, the C12 was smoother up top, though. If you're comparing the VR to a 414-series of any ilk, then yeah, the 414 might sound less warm simply because you're looking at a transformerless output vs a tube & x-formers & all that stuff that gives off the warm & fuzzys... still doesn't mean they're not just this side of "crispy" on the high end, though.

Hey John,

Are you using the stock version or the Lundahl version?

David.
