These were for the ASR-10 sampler which used the same dsp as paris.

Let us know.

Hi Dimitrios.

These were the brainchild of Bill Mauchly, who I understand was also involved in PARIS (I believe he wrote the PARIS mixer code). I have Bill's current email address; inviting him to come over to the Wiki to add to/correct his entry and maybe doing an interview with him on the blog are amongst the items on my (unfortunately rather long) to-do list.

Asking him about where WAVEBOY is at nowadays is definitely on my list.

By the way, if my understanding is correct, porting the WAVEBOY plugs to PARIS was fairly well along in development years ago; I don't know what stage it got to. It disappeared in the chaos in the post-discontinuation phase of PARIS along with a couple of other interesting efforts.

I'm guessing the business side was the complication rather than anything technical, but a lot of business assumptions that were valid in 2003 have been superseded by new realities by 2008. Definitely worth renewing contact and pursuing.

Hi Dimitrios,

If I had the source code for the effects, I could port them. The tough part is getting the source code.

All the best,

Mike

Hi Kerry,

I'm not sure about where the info about bill re evolimit and guis and mike arnao came from, but it's not really accurate. Neither is the stuff about the waveboy plugins. It's not that big a deal, but Bill might get peeved at me as there were a whole raft of plugins that I was supposed to finish, start selling commercially and give him a cut.

Heya Chuck - d'oh! I'm relieved you spotted it! Log in to the Wiki and edit at will, that's the whole philosophy behind a Wiki format - the user community has the ability to spot incorrect or incomplete information and fix it on the spot. If you prefer, you can email me corrections and I'll fix it.

Gee Chuck !!
Please find them and if possible handle them to Mike !!!
That would serve us enormously !!
Thanks for clarifying !
Regards,
Dimitrios

jeeez dont loose that stuff, its so valuable! :-) the asr-x/fizmo effects are the same basically. the vocoder is pretty lame, but the rest is top notch almost from start to finish.
