That's very strange, the submix should contain exactly what it hears at its outputs. Do you have any advanced patching - like physically patching out of one submix into another via the "External" plugin? I'd guess that would kill those reverbs as non-related submixes mute during the render process. Check and see if any of the sixteen channels or eight auxes on that submix have "external" plugins involved in their routing.

Hi Kerry,I will check that tonight but I am not using any ext plugins or devices.The only thing different since I have been doing a bit in the studio is I have installed Mike's set of reverbs to my list.I don't think there would be a conflict there.I opened V2.0 & tried ren submix & all was fine.It also doesn't play the audio while rendering sometimes.... just silence.I am thinking it could be a problem with the harddrive & I will defrag when I get a chance.Thanks for the help & will report back.

I'll keep thinking and see what I come up with, but if you come across the solution post it here and we'll get it up on the Wiki - one more oddity documented for the aid of future seekers .
