Maybe some of you have already experienced this, but I haven't.

My UAD-1 card that I purchased in 2003 went South last week, disappearing from the UAD Meter config (though it still showed up in Apple System Profiler). I called tech support, described the problem, and asked what I could do. They told me the card needed to be replaced.

How much? Nothing. No cost.

I picked up a new one from the Canadian Distributor here in Toronto today and installed it, re-authorized the plugins (plus got a few new extra ones 'cause the card is a newer configuration) and away we go.

Very nice that a piece of Computer gear has a lifetime warranty, and I get an upgrade for free 5 years later.

I think you hijacked Ted's thread :)

Sorry Aaron and Ted.

Has this already been discussed?

Or did my question show up in one of Ted's other threads for those reading on the web site?

I get the group as a newsgroup in my email reader and it's a separate heading here.

Anyway, on the question of "should radio stations pay performance rights" it seems to me they should. If internet radio has to pay for content, why not terrestrial radio?

Cheers,
-Jamie

I was under the impression that all radio stations paid royalties (or a fee) to PROs...you mean I've been wrong all this time?

Well in that case yes, and let's make it retroactive

Currently, songwriters and publishers are paid royalties, but the performers get nothing.

Did you talk to Dave Dysart? Nice fellow, very knowledgeable and helpful.

David.

Well, here in Australia, at least, Radio stations pay a yearly "blanket" fee for the rights to play music.
They don't pay per performance.
In my days in radio, (early 70's), we had to log all tracks played, (well before computer anything), and a monthly sample was averaged out over the year, and that's what we paid.
Don't think it's like that any more, I think it's just a one off fee...
