Not finals, necessarily, but close enough to where it'll just be a tweak or two before they're finished. I'll hand it to these guys - they're into some weird shit, but at least they don't want everything louder than everything else, and they don't want all the tops of all the waveforms looking like a bunch of Darfurian refugees standing in a canoe.

I think the guitars might be a bit raspy in a few places, but the guys like 'em as-is.

Comments welcome....

Neil,

Nice work. Kick is doing it perfectly. Multiband again?

I'd love to hear a tiny amount of short verb on those bright=20 guitar distorted chicks early on. Nice clean tone too.

What guitar/amp/mic/pre/comp setup did you use for that?

Cool.

Yep - actually the story behind the kick & snare is that we almost DIDN'T mic them - the guy wanted to go with a triggered kit he had programmed in his Roland TD-20 for the kick, snare & toms, and live mics for the cymbals & hats. I told him: "You know what, why don't I just slap a mic on the kick & snare anyway, while we've got everything set up... can't hurt, right?" Turns out he LOVES the live kick & snare sounds we got - we ended up not even using the triggered sounds on those. So anyway, it's a D-6 through a Chandler TG-2, and I had picked up an Earthworks Kick-pad recently, so I stuck that on the kick mic, too, since we had the kick all stuffed with towels & such up against the head to prevent it from double-triggering on the rebound... I figured I'd see if the kickpad might help give me some tone right off the bat & it worked out OK. From there it was just my usual Multiband comp/No EQ settings for the kick.

The clean tone? Again, not sure which song, because there are a couple parts with clean tone. If you mean the tone in: "Just When U Thought", that was the main guitarist's ESP with EMG humbuckers through his Mesa amp & cab, if you mean the clean tone in: "Jimmy The Pill", that was one of my Strats through the same setup, but in that case, we also doubled it. Mics/pres in both cases on his cab were: Audix i5 through a Focusrite Red 8, and a BLUE Ball through a Grace101, tracked dual-mono on each pass.

Thanks, Lamont - actually I'm kinda surprised you like it, considering that it's so far removed from the genres you said you normally work in.

Maybe there's a latent Metal-head inside you waiting to burst forth! (kinda like the baby lizard-thang in "Alien", but not as life-threatening LOL)

Naw.. Being from Motown(Home of Rock n Roll), I grew up like many geetar players immersed into the 70's rock scene. It's a very diverse place (Detroit) for music. Ilove and respect all genres of music. Personally, I tooka musical turn while in my late teens to Jazz, Gospel, and my forte funk..But, still played Rock at times thru out the 80's. Hey!!, you had to play that Eddie Van Halen Beat It solo! Lol! to be taken seriously in those days.. It's funny, I still have my Red Kramer Axes from the 80's.. I have them disassembled, but those babies with the floyd roses and 3 dual rail (single coil) ducan humbuckers screamed!!

Neil,
I was talking about the distorted chicks and clean sound in "Just When =
You Thought".
Nice tune with a different vibe.

I'm surprised a drummer would be looking for triggered sounds at the get = go.
You proved him wrong. Good work.

The = clean=20
tone? Again, not sure which song, because there are a couple parts =
with=20
clean tone. If you mean the tone in: "Just When U Thought", that = was the=20
main guitarist's ESP with EMG
humbuckers through his Mesa amp & =
cab, if=20
you mean the clean
tone in: "Jimmy The Pill", that was one of my = Strats=20
through the same setup, but in that case, we also doubled =
it.
Mics/pres=20
in both cases on his cab were: Audix i5 through a Focusrite Red 8, =
and a=20
BLUE Ball through a Grace101, tracked dual-mono on each=20
pass.
