Isn't this cute?

This one is the kicker though, and elucidates my periodic rants better than I do:
<http://dineshdsouza.com/books/enemy-intro.html>

Our economy is gonna bounce along the bottom for a while. This wasn't necessary. Now I hear the Democrats starting to harp on the economy and tie it ti Iraq. there is, most definitely, a connection.

<http://drsanity.blogspot.com/2007/04/selfless-narcissism.htm> I and the following excerpt is something I've been ranting about here and elsewhere for years:

The Democrats and their glorious leaders, who have become so narcissistically invested in this country's defeat as a political strategy to accumulate power and "restore American honor", that they have--wittingly or unwittingly--decided to sell their countrymen out to the very enemy they are currently fighting. They mean well, of course. They do it for those wonderful 'selfless' reasons--like "peace" and "social justice" and all. They really support the troops .

Let's just ignore the fact that they bear considerable responsibility for the ongoing violence and death of our troops as they enable and encourage the priorities of the enemy. Why should the terrorists alter their homicidal behavior? It is working! People like Nancy Pelosi are living proof of the effectiveness of their strategy.

There really is a problem. It's a problem that has been aggravated and encouraged by the left in this country.....you know, the ones who don't quite understand that they will be the first to be slaughtered once they have thrown a wrench in the gears of those who are willing to protect them. They just do not get it. The Islamists parrot the leftist American Imperialist tripe that the leftists love to hear and ascribe to this country but the Islamists do it by design, to dupe the left into helping them destroy the protectors of the culture that the left hopes to protect by trying to appease those who will not be appeased until the leftists are either dead or are kneeling toward Mecca. Once it is too late, they can then whine about how pissed off they are that there's no separation between mosque and state...right before they are separated from their heads. I recognized it years ago. So did lots of other people.....funny, I didn't hear a peep out of OBama though.

OK.....now I'm of to rape the land.

I've heard two separate commentaries (one a major news agency, the other a Brit's personal rant) about how the UK is catering to the whims of Islam - they've restricted the use of the Three Little Pigs story in some schools. England is funding Islamic schools for their Muslim citizens. They are considering passing Islamic laws in some areas to appease that community (these were echoed in both, separate and independent commentaries - two completely different viewpoints seeing the same thing happen). In effect, the UK is making concessions right and left and getting nothing in return - just more demands. Forget their own history, people and culture, just give up in the face of fear of suicide bombers, sarin gas, and extremist protests.

The news agency report basically said exactly what you are DJ - the US is doing the same thing - bowing down and letting our "pacifist" leftwing veil of "peace" and "equality" and "justice" dupe us into giving up those very ideals, playing right into the hands of extremism and even terrorism. That's the paradox that's become our country. And this is just one case of how the left is ironically proposing and touting exactly the opposite of what is the fabric of our country.

And, btw - I can't believe anyone would even dare to post such racist propaganda as this (and that's exactly what it is) when the original post was on radical islam, not slavery. Simply amazing.

This forum really has lost it. I'm out. I've really had enough of these far fetched bizarre reactions and detours into left field.

Some in our country have a built in excuse. Whenever they don't get their way, when ever they are caught red handed, whenever they need an excuse or a reason for what they did, they play the race card. The race card is there answer to everything.

Listen,
My comments are not about the article,I'm not defending the left. I just find the statement "the fabric of are country" to be bullshit. We forget about are past and pass judgement on others. This is the self-righteousness I speak of. As to why I do not post my name? Because of the self-righteousness I speak of. Wake up! Clean up your backyard. Playing the race card? It could'nt be played if racism was'nt true and alive today! You may look at my comments as detour into left field,but my comments are directed at your comment about the "fabric" of are country. The truth is almost all the founding fathers were slave owners,and some only freed their slaves after they died. Now there is one thing I agree on with you is that this place has gone way down!

Why do yoy think that your opinion is the right one? Are you saying that this country was'nt built on the backs of slavery? How am I a hypocrite? Ask questions?

My

first post was nothing but questions. Having the guts to stand up for what you believe in with integrity, honor and respect, but without any pansy, pacifist whining and hiding behind labels and stereotypes". are serious?

Why did it take so long for every man to have the right same rights? Is'nt that something we were suppose to believe in? Honor? respect? Look,do'nt get made at me or anyone that confronts you with the truth. I love this country just as much as you. If I can say that with your permission. But we have alot of work to do. We want to blame everyone else for are problems.(not to say we are the cause of all the problems) Think what you want about my credibility,my words can stand on there own! This makes them no less true you say "slavery". Get the picture yet?

If you want to start a thread about how the word "fabric" offends you, feel free, but don't pass judgement and make assumptions about my intent in my reply to DJ. I wasn't talking to you, about you, or for your benefit, whoever you are.

And I find it extraordinarily offensive that you would assume you have the right to cry about injustices done to other people over 150 years ago, and extrapolate that to being a permanent stigma dooming our country, and woven into every conversation from here to eternity. I won't bother to explain "fabric" to you since you didn't get it last time.

If you want to play the game of associating yourself with the past for sake of playing victim, I'm part American Indian (direct descendant), and "we" were here first, and the first to lose rights and freedoms here. ;-) If you want to associate history with present day people, why not claim Germany is racist and doomed because of Hitler's genocidal mania? How about the Netherlands for the barbarians?

Enough of this. I only came back to be clear about how diluded you are in your assumptions in this debate. It used to be fun to hang out here and exchange opinions, however diverse, but this tangent really takes the cake - must be the twilight zone now. I guess now you'll rant about how "cake" or the word "twilight" is a "bull****" word as a result of slavery by some twisted and bizarre association as well. Have fun.

Racism is alive today and it goes both ways. Want to know what pisses me off? The Black Job expo, the Black phone book and the Black everything else that is exclusionary. You can't have it both ways. Then again I'm pissed at old people getting cheaper movie tickets. hehe Uhhhhh.....duid anyone read the article by Dinesh D'Sousa? Care to discuss it? Care to debunk it with facts?

I'd be interested to hear arguments against it as it is so spot on, IMO, that it should be glaringly obvious to anyone over 12 years old..

Of course, if you disagree with it, or with the content of my post, I'd be winning to listen.....and if you have any family photos with everyone wearing matching kaffiyas and AK47's.....that would be interesting to discuss too.

Oh yah.....BTW, my name is Doug Joyce

Dedric,

Wow....this one went around the bend PDQ. Maybe we should start small bites, like discussing this article:

<http://dineshdsouza.com/books/enemy-intro.html>

There is a lot there to think about. that has nothing to do with race.

;o)
Deej

That it did. Twilight zone material....

I believe I've heard D'Souza interviewed (PBS maybe) and he seems pretty observant and has a solid view of Islam as well (I've also heard mid-East scholars (native Muslims, not Americans) say the same thing he is).

It's hard to point the finger directly at "the left" as a group since that's a broad brush stroke, but in general, Islamic extremists are emboldened by our lack of moral principals as a culture, which as D'Souza points out, is propogated by the non-conservative side of our country. I also have a feeling these terrorists really don't need a solid excuse - just a target to hate, and we fit the bill, as does a good bit of Europe as well (lest Europeans sit idly by and point an accusing finger at us). This is of course leaving out a much bigger story of what has been happening to non-Muslims in Sudan, Iran, Syria, etc for many years. Ours and Europe's time may be coming...

I agree with D'Souza's proposition that an amoral approach in our country (that is usually called "left" since it isn't conservative by intent or belief) is doing nothing to help us in the eyes of extremist Islam, and by nature, propogates a social and moral trend that is obviously offensive to most Muslims, esp. extremists. Islam is in many ways more conservative than conservative Christianity when it comes to controlling/restricting social behavior, strictness of discipline, and certainly in their belief that society (and all people) **must** adhere to that belief, by force if necessary - there is no freedom of choice in that mindset, only freedom to die. Imho, it isn't a stretch to say that a non-faith based society isn't going to win points with Bin Laden's friends by nature, not just action. But on a larger scale, there is no end to loss of unity, deviation and ever changing rationalization without a pervading, encompassing morality nudging people in the same direction **with** regard, respect and caring for one another regardless of other differences. And that, in essence, is the crux of the problem on both sides.

Thanks for taking the time Rod. What he says really jibes with what I have heard from Muslim friends I know. they live here but communicate often with relatives in the Middle East and in Malasia. There is a lot of anger at American : "culture" which is inescapable due to broadcast television and the internet.....and that's the rub. Sure, there is anger and animosity at the US supporting Israel and what is happening in Iraq but there are many who badly want us to succeed in Iraq because they consider it to be an incredibly novel and revolutionary concept to attempt to establish a democracy in the Middle East. The deep upwelling of resentment in the Islamic world isn't reported by the press because the press itself is a big part of the problem. They sell advertizing and have no sense of propriety and respect for those who advocate traditional Islamic culture. It's pretty easy for Mullas to whip up a storm of resentment when the media is barraging the airwaves with images that are an athema to the mores that they try to instill in their children.

No they have not.. Not any of them. The conservative media has tried to "marginalize" Rev Jackson and Sharpton for speaking and revealing the truth.

Aaron one great American Fredrick Douglas stated that " Aa true patriot is a lover of his country who rebukes and does not excuse its sins."

So, are we as citizens of this nation not to speak out against injustices that still exist today? I wish for God that we did not a predijuce and racism in this country. Believe or not most African Americans are TIRED of it. It's OLD.. But, you still have folks who hate and marginalize because of thier heritage and skin color. So, yes to many Rev Jackson Sharpon, Farrakan, Panthers are heros for standing up and fighting for their causes.. I'm sorry if you don;t understand that..

There's not double standard here.

I took a few minutes and read that and I think it is brilliant.

It explains why both the lefty explanation and the Bush one are so unsatisfying and incomplete.

I recommend it highly.

Seriously Bill, there where many here feeding them and the trolls must had good laughs all the way to their ultrasmall beds when seeing how easy it is to fire up something and someone anonymous;-) It seems more that Yah/No got real food from some of us here, so their sleep could be well with sweet dreams about how great a troll can be for some hours;-)

So, they have no human frailties and would never, ever do something wrong or hide something in the name of the cause. Not any of them. Man, that's delusional. Nobody is infallible and everybody has a cause they push if they're willing to get into the spotlight like any of them have.

> Aaron one great American Fredrick Douglas stated that " Aa true patriot

Wise words. Doesn't that apply to other prudent areas of life and in all directions? I constantly question my belief system, my relationships and how I deal with them, my reason for existence. I'm always trying to sharpen the saw. I'm in competition with myself, every day, and it forces me to do things better and look for my own inadequacies. I realize this isn't for everyone, but man I think that's the reason we're here, to learn the important lessons for the next round we face. I don't have desire or time for looking at some dude and saying "he's Race X. Hate him, here's his label." I understand it exists, I just wish we'd evolve as a people above it but humans use visual indicators and body language and it will have to be a concious elevation from all sides to succeed.

Believe it or not it goes both ways and most Whites are TIRED of hearing it too. And being Black doesn't make you a special case. I grew up in many towns, and the racism towards American Indians is also great. But guess what else LaMont - I am of Native American Ancestry. I also am German, so you can't see my Western Cherokee physically. You might also find it interesting to know that there is racism within the ranks of Cherokee - Western Cherokee is not the same thing. Rather like dark and light skinned black folks. I get an unrestricted view of that racism because I don't look a certain way, and I get the brunt of the Indian's racism for the same reason. And it sucks to see someone play the race card to gain an advantage when things don't go the way they like, or they couldn't earn it on their own merits. I could tell you stories (as I'm sure you could) but I'll spare the bandwidth here. Life would be a lot easier without that chip on the shoulder for some people, but they're going to have to make it disappear by their own choice(s). The best I can do in life is see it, understand it, avoid it and sometimes try to correct it intelligently.

- > But, you still have folks who hate and marginalize because of their

So you're supposing you know me well enough that I don't understand, I don't get it. Since this is text, I feel a need to tell you at this point, I'm speaking in a calm, non-angry manor for the following: Don't assume I'm ignorant or the evil Whitey. You've never met me, and probably have no idea what I even look like, much less the life that surrounds me on a daily basis. You have no idea who my friends are or have been, and no idea what sorts of injustices I may or may not have experienced based on things like skin color. Don't throw daggers, because as I said originally they're double sided.

Having a hero is one thing, however as you already stated about America " A true patriot is a lover of his country who rebukes and does not excuse its sins.".. How's that not apply to American Citizens/Heros/Humans as well... you know like Sharpton, Farrakan, the Black Panthers?

Anyhoo, happy Easter I'm off to color eggs with my 6 yr old

Hi Dedic,

Your post was incredibly offensive to me, for the following reasons:

"And I find it extraordinarily offensive that you would assume you have the right to cry about injustices done to other people over 150 years ago"

I believe we were lynching black americans right up into the 1950's. I don't think I'm wrong about that.

I believe that black americans were overtly and systematically deprived of their rights as citizens clear through the 1970s and beyond. Look at the legislation enacted and the case law related to access to financing, housing and employment over the past three decades. It's a sad story, not a story of entitlement, but of leveling the playing field.

One of my firmest beliefs is that it's not up to the opressor to tell the oppressed when it's time to 'get over it'.

Racisim is alive and well in America.

Chuck, this post is pretty unfair, Dedric original posted something that had nothing to do with racism. The anonymous poster attacked Dedric and turned the thread in to the blame game on racism. Speaking of the blame game, who are you blaming for lynching in the 50s? You, me and Dedric had nothing to do with lynching, EVER!!!! Next time you say "we", and "opressor", I think you should think about it.

Racism is alive and well in America, because some people are keeping it alive!!!

Well Chuck, you don't have to worry - I won't be back. This is long, because I don't want to be misunderstood, yet again, for the 12398231987th time (and my last).

It was offensive to me because the poster was using a 150 year old event as a direct basis, and associative experience for his/her personal experience - you have to be pretty old to have been a slave in the early days of the US. I also find it more than mildly disturbing because it was a bizarre tangent from a single word, with no purpose other than that bring up a volatile topic and ignite controversy. Well done Yah - you got us all to tear into one another. Best use of trolling I've seen in a while.

I just don't see how anyone has the right to claim to be a victim of an event you weren't personally a part of. Now, and this is VERY IMPORTANT, so PLEASE READ CAREFULLY before assuming: being affected by fallout, or extenuating ideals, actions or social prejudices extending *FROM* that era, such as modern day racism, ethnic, cultural or religious prejudices? YES!

*But*, bringing up slavery as an excuse about how you lost a job last week, or felt slighted in a restaurant, or take issue with an everyday word, is no better than me (as a Christian) bringing up Rome's imprisonment, torture and killing of Christians as a way to gain sympathy for my beliefs, and that's why I don't (because that would be ridiculous), regardless of how much grief I take here for my beliefs. And from where I'm sitting, it's been far more than I have the time or energy for anymore.

Now, when people talk about being victimized today in personal situations, that's another issue, but that wasn't the case, and that was *not* what I was talking about with the comment you quoted out of context.

You guys really need to start reading before you make blatant assumptions about me or other people here. If we weren't a slave, we don't really have the right to claim to be a victim of slavery itself, so we? If one of us lost a job, or were passed over for a promotion, or have been profiled, that's another issue and one we desperately need to address - but not with government, but with people, personal perceptions, and a determination to stop thinking in terms of prejudice, but start acting with no prejudice.

How about you Chuck? Are you a minority that has personally suffered the prejudices and injustices from the late 1800's (post slavery) through the 50's? Were you even alive in the 50's? If you aren't a minority, do you really have the right to play this card to make your own point?

It's not fair to assume the pains and trials of others just to make a point on a forum. That's responsible for propagating and keeping racism alive as much as racism itself, and that's what I find sad, and troubling - it isn't helping people actually experiencing racism or prejudice, and it isn't making us more aware of it - it's just igniting more and more resentment on both sides.

Solving racism will only happen when both sides stop seeing skin color, culture and ethnic differences, and start seeing neighbors, friends and people instead. Bringing up the past is only useful as long as it keeps us from repeating it, but at a point it only serves to propagate the issue in areas where it doesn't exist (i.e. with people who are *not* prejudice - it gets old too hearing that I am lumped into the prejudice pot just for being white - that's also racism, and it too needs to stop if racism is to end completely). We are supposed to learn from history, not use it as a platform for spreading guilt, fear, "feel sorry for me", etc. Prejudice sucks. Racism sucks. Hating other people sucks. There is no value in any of these three. Isn't it time to set the example rather than just talking about it??

If you are a minority, or in my case, a Christian, there are certainly cases of prejudice and imho, we absolutely should bring those to light and find a way to end them. Believe me, I really don't feel welcome here as a Christian, but of course, since I'm not a Muslim or a minority race, it's perfectly acceptable to berate me. And I see this everyday. Of course, I can hide my beliefs, and since not saying anything is easier than changing one's skin color, that's what I'm expected to do. But really, is there any difference?

I have a diverse group of family members, friends, peers, colleagues, etc, and none of them complains about past events as a means to make the world feel sorry them - instead we deal with current issues and struggles that face us, not those of our grandfathers, great grandfathers, etc. I have the deepest respect for them, for their determination, character, integrity and success as a result.

People that really want to make a difference don't wait for the world around them to change - they find a way to change the world around them, but not by beligerence, anger, or hatred, but by bringing people together to understand, comprehend, share both good and bad, and start anew.

I could quote personal stories that are phenomenal testiments of exactly this, but out of respect for those people, I can't and won't. You don't know me from adam, what color my skin is, or what prejudice I, my friends, family, etc have personally endured or witnessed, and I don't claim that to amount to a hill of beans compared to what people endure in other parts of the world.

You just proved my point on associating someone else's struggles Chuck, and I'll bet you've never even seen the inside of prejudice yourself - few of us really know what it's like, and those that do, act like they want to own it as a personal matter of pride, that no one else can help carry - that's also sad, because you might find a heck of a lot of support and encouragement by just letting it go, and opening up a bit, even here on a silly newsgroup.

I feel sorry for those that really do experience it and have that belittled by people who only use it to grandstand their opinions. Maybe this NG should take a trip to the Sudan and see what real prejudice is all about. To be honest, I'm embarrassed for all of us, at how poorly we have come to understand one another and how quickly we are to pull the trigger on vitrolous comments and responses, to hide behind false names, and to use someone else's pain as a debating point.

It would have been far better, if some had posted personal experiences, trials, struggles, etc, and let us unite as a community of audio and music people to encourage, support, and if at all possible, change that situation, to the best of our ability. Instead, through the anonymity of text, we debate issues usually out of our control, or at least we don't let on enough for anyone to know if you are personally experiencing that pain, struggle, etc. Sharing opinions is great, but is that really what this has come to now? We all stay so generic that there is nothing but emotionally charged banter to what we say, and it becomes impossible to associate the person with the pain behind the rant.

Sad that it's come to this since there are some truly fantastic people here and the diversity of opinions and experiences is what made it fun to discuss, learn, grow, encourage, etc, even if it was supposed to just be about Paris.

Good luck to you all, and my apologies for inciting this thread to continue, for sharing my beliefs and opinions.

And the reverse discrimination I experience regularly is not right either.

"How about you Chuck? Are you a minority that has personally suffered the prejudices and injustices from the late 1800's (post slavery) through the 50's? Were you even alive in the 50's? If you aren't a minority, do you really have the right to play this card to make your own point? "

No, no and no. I get your point. I was late to the party (thread). I was stirring the pot.

The only prejudice and injustice that I have ever experienced is by virtue of growing up a criminally underweight, oddball, piano playing, non-sports oriented computer geek beatle fan. I have to say that hasn't been all that bad.

So, I apologize.
