Ok - this is no April fool's joke. I'm just now getting around to checking this plugin out. I must also say - that I really don't dig digital amp stuff, but upon initially messing around with this (basically just turning it on), I am certainly not scared off, and have a feeling that I will probably end up using it more than I would think so.

These samples are from a project that I'm in the middle of wrapping up. It's a collaboration between myself and a good friend - it's a strange fusion of styles. The group is called Fingerpuppet Orchestra, and the song is called Disco Rodeo, and you should hear Mike's plug on it.

More details here.... <http://www.carlamburn.com/Audet.htm>

rock on!,

Haha - thanks Rich. The only thing using Mike's plugin is that flat/dry guitar on the right channel (of which I think sounds pretty good). It's been years since I tracked this - but the "wha banjo" was something in which I rigged a microphone into a wha wha pedal, and then to a preamp. To me, that was the perfect neo-rodeo sound for the tune - wha wah banjo! :)

Yeah - the plugin is just simulating an amp - the guitar track was recorded direct (first mix totally direct/dry), so you mainly notice what it's doing in the intro, as the guitar track starts - you can A/B the mixes and hear the difference.

Mike, Carl, I got up out of the chair and started boogying, nice modulations, very cool augmented voicing at the end of the choral section, which is a cool idea in itself. The wha wha banjo sound is nice and fat, very original dudes. Is the wha wha sound the plug, or is it the modulation or distortion?

Love that wah wah banjo, man. So the guitar is using the plug in. It sounds dry and natural, what exactly is the plug doing? I can't tell, sorry for being so dense.

Thanks Bill. We will self-release an EP sometime in the next few months. As soon as I get the project mixed, I plan to do some web stuff promo. The songs are all very different and... pretty off the wall, so it's pretty fun to hear some of the feedback we get from it.
