I get the same feeling everytime I ding a new instrument.....

As DC said, now it's truly 'yours'. That said, fingernail polish can be = your best friend.

I had a new steel guitar delivered to me while working at Quad Studios in Nashville--a beautiful blue lacquer body with nice pearl inlay. The builder dropped it off that evening and we had it out on the studio floor with lots of other gear etc. After we went home, cartage came by to pick up all the gear--at least three different companies. Anyway, when we came back the next morning, there was a big ding right under the pearl inlaid logo on the front--clear into the wood...didn't even have it 24 hours.

At least I didn't worry so much about when it was going to happen...
