Right there with man, I've never had the stuff but that's the general reaction I've heard in the past. Even the veg lovers have told me to go easy on that stuff, LIGHTLY spread it and it's an aquired taste. That was pretty dang funny Bill, even though I was pretty sure I knew (and maybe because) what was coming for ole' dude.

It's really not terrible, but you don't spread it like peanut butter. A little goes a long way.

It's been years since I had it, but as I recall it's salty and tangy - what the Brits call "savory". It does not taste like vegetables particularly. I can't really say it is like anything else, so it's tough to describe. Maybe if you took a cube of concentrated vegetable broth and spread it.

It's a Yeast Extract... that and salt I think. ;o)

I have a jar here. It's ingredients in order of quantity is:

Yeast Extract

Salt

Mineral Salt

Malt Extract (from Barley)

Color

....and then various vitamins added... mostly B group.

It doesn't taste like anything else really, other than Marmite. While it tastes nothing like it, the closest I can relate it to is perhaps Soy Sauce, largely because of the importance of salt to both.

Cheers,

Kim.

Why not just salt your bread? Sounds like dyed, salted, yeast to me (and mineral salt to boot... yikes).

And since butter already has salt in it, and bread has yeast, and dye is usually to keep you from hurling at the sight of the original color....that leaves the final question... why? ;-)

I think I'll stick to peanut butter, jam, cheese, or honey.

Hehe, ok, I'll give you the low down on how to taste it. Indeed I may be willing to send some to anybody interested, but don't expect to love it first bite. That said, to have it as we like it:

(*) Fresh bakery bread or toast - HOT. No half stale bread, cold toast or supermarket loaves. They can be ok, but they'll never compare to fresh bread or hot toast.

(*) Note that vegemite is a spread you have when you're having nothing on your bread. It's like you put butter on. Then treat vegemite as like a herb or spice which just needs a touch. Apply it like you might apply a medium hotness chilli paste. You can always put more on.

(*) Vegemite works ok if you hardly have any at all. You can just have fresh bread and (preferably REAL) butter, and then just the smallest scrape of vegemite on a piece of bread. Once you get used to it you learn how much you like, but you're far safer to put less than more.

A lot of Australians seem to agree that if you want to really appreciate a piece of freshly baked bread, you have to have it either on it's own, with just butter, or with just butter and vegemite. When you spread Vegmite it shouldn't cover the toast. There should be scrapings of it with gaps in between. And no thickness to it. Maybe 1/16th inch of vegemite just here and there on the toast/bread.

From a guy who's 35 and eats vegemite several times a week, while I'm sure I wouldn't have reacted like the guy in the video, I saw that piece of toast and with no butter and that massive amount of vegemite I don't think I would have eaten it either. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

Marmite to me tastes the same only not as strong. You have to put a lot more

Personally I prefer Vegemite, but perhaps that's like people who eat chilli

Hehe, I'm pretty sure that's an old wives tale, but if it's on wikipedia...

Hehe. They are a little bland IMO. I prefer either toast, or just one slice of fresh bread or bread roll for my Vegemite. Alternatively a slice of cheese goes alright in a Vegemite sandwich... ...I'm not sure that Spam really should be stocked on supermarket shelves, and the idea of it with Vegemite I find rather troubling. ;o)

Cheers,

Personally, I prefer a good old English "bitey" cheese, aged over a long period to give it that edge.

Vegemite? Sure. :o) Email me. The Post Office seriously is next to the Supermarket, so...

No politics? Hehe. I wouldn't say it's none. I'd say there's a fair bit.
;o) I don't think I'm a Nazi moderator. ;o) I'd like to think not.

But seriously, if anybody hasn't tried Vegemite and is interested, why not?
Email me. If we get too many I may have to ask for donations, but next time I go shopping I could probably ship 20 off in half an hour, so I'm up for it. :o) If people posted back with pics it could be quite a hoot. ;o)

You'd have to eat it in the studio for the pic though, I guess. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

PS. My Paris system is still broken. I must fix it. ;o)

Thanks guys! I'm starting to wonder if I was aussie in another life or something. Everything about this vegemite deal sounds like stuff I already love, including the sharp cheddar. I can't believe I've waited this late in life to investigate it for myself.

Any preference for shredded or slices?

WENSLEYDALE:
Good morning, sir. Welcome to the National Cheese Emporium.

MOUSEBENDER:
Ah, thank you my good man.

WENSLEYDALE:
What can I do for you, sir?

MOUSEBENDER:

Well, I was, uh, sitting in the public library on Thurmond Street just now, skimming through Rogue Herries by Hugh Walpole, and I suddenly came over all peckish.

WENSLEYDALE:

Peckish, sir?

MOUSEBENDER:

Esurient.

WENSLEYDALE:

Eh?

MOUSEBENDER:

Eeeeeee, I were all hungry, like!

WENSLEYDALE:

Ah, hungry.

MOUSEBENDER:

In a nutshell. And I thought to myself, 'a little fermented curd will do the trick'. So I curtailed my Walpoling activities, sallied forth, and infiltrated your place of purveyance to negotiate the vending of some cheesy comestibles.

WENSLEYDALE:

Come again?

MOUSEBENDER:

I'd like to buy some cheese!

:D

Good lord, you can get it here in the states, you just have to look around a bit. No need for you to spend ten bucks on shipping a $2 jar of goo.
