Subject: Authorization hiccup
Posted by Paisley on Sun, 20 Nov 2011 13:06:31 GMT

After a few false starts, & some well appreciated advice from Mike, my Paris system finally booted up on XP.   Haven't had time to run any projects as of yet, but it all looks to be in order. However there is one hiccup!

After loading Mike's drivers, I installed Paris from my original Paris Pro V3 disk, which of course asked for authorization. in the entire time I've owned it (from new) it's only ever thrown up two different challenges, & I've kept a record of both responses. I can't remember what the challenges were, so I can't tell you if the current challenge it's thrown up is different from the other two, but either way neither of the responses I have will work. I had to open it up in demo mode, which gave me 7 days to run it.

A couple days later I found the link on this forum to download the Paris V3 installer. I uninstalled my version & ran the download, hoping it might not require authorization. However it did, so again I opened it in demo mode, which gave me - 5 days left to run it!!..

Does the V3 installer from this forum require authorization? If not, it looks like my original disk of V3 has left some sort of file tucked away on the computer that polices the demo period. Anyone know where I might find this file, & how I can get rid of it?