>Damn!!!!!! That was fast. I just mailed it Friday. It usually takes 4-5 days to get mail here from anywhere. Guess it's faster going out?

I'll ring you up later as I'm on my way out the door right now, but basically.....hear all of that granular distortion?????? Wavelab is showing over 100k errors per 6 second interval.

You got anything that will cure it?

Talk later.

Cheers,

s were due to the felt cushion that the key rests on when pushed. Turn's out the cushion had pushed aside therefore exposing the glue that is suppose to keep it in place, when the key came down, it would stick and take about 2 second to go back. I re-installed the felt cushion and prob fixed. All that and a good paint job and I now have a pretty good studio keyboard for giga'ing...!! If the key stays down, then i'm not sure in this case but it looks like some kind of counter weight mechanism malfunction.

Good luck and hope this helps bro.

I would try typing in:

RD 600 keyboard repair OR:

RD 600 "sticky key" remedy OR, perhaps:

RD 600 beer spillage

I like #1 best for the overall design or look, but the part in the middle looks like it's saying "G3" instead of "G-with-a-sideways-'M'". Dunno if that would confuse people.

Next, I like #2 for it's clean lines & ease of reading (I'm trying to envision it passing by on the "-mobile" itself), but #3 is probably the catchiest overall - depends if you want to convey a sense of mirth or professionalism. I think #2 conveys professionalism with just a touch of mirth (the propeller), whereas #3 is more mirth. Dunno if the wrench implies only major problems (IOW, subconsciously, what are people going to get from the wrench - that they should only call you if something's REALLY screwed up? Because obviously you don't use a wrench very often on a computer. Not sure... something about the wrench sends the wrong message).

Finally, I think that no matter which logo you go with, you should incorporate the "computer support on call" slogan into it... that sends the message of promptness, rapidity of response, no appointment needed, etc. I think that saying will generate more business for you if that's a part of the logo.

Just my $0.02

y livestock, they would find me even if my studio was in an auditorium somewhere. In fact, just about every commercial establishment around here has the resident pooch. Maybe I'm being overly cautious.....but then again, maybe not.

We would not tolerate it among those who wire our buildings, work on our cars, or give us colonoscopies, yet we are supposed to accept it as part of the music biz?

Like hell.

I say fine 'em bigtime AND jail em. The public is NOT as stupid as many musicians think. They just don't get to hear anything that isn't promoted i
