hey, Parisians-

It occurs to me that after having my website up for nearly 10 years on a local server I should bite the bullet and get my own domain.

Exploring this option has opened my eyes to what exists in the cyberworld in the way of web hosting companies that offer your domain and apparently a zillion other features, most of which I've never heard of.

I know nothing of Pearl scripts or CGI (other than what they are), but I do HTML well enough to have thrown my own site together over the years. The services I've been looking at mention everything in the world except HTML...

So, the question is, what are you guys (and gals) using? How satisfied are you with the service and features? How much is it costing? Is your site strictly personal, or business, or both, or what? Are you using an ISP, or a server in your closet?

thanks for your time and experience

-steve

Steve,

There's a server in my kitchen, next to the stove, and Kim W will attest to. ;o) It runs Linux and Apache, and Dnews for the NG.

As far as I know the machine has NEVER EVER crashed due to software. The hardware has had some minor issues over the years. It runs cgi and pearl if you wish, and html.

I'm 99.8% sure every web server ever runs html, therefor they just don't mention it.

I have had very few hassles with running my own server. If you have broadband and a static IP already it's fairly economical. Basically just the electricity, and you have complete control.

Of course if you don't know any LINUX you may have trouble. I'm not sure that they make APACHE for Windows... though they may these days. It's not hard to do a Linux install these days however, and you pretty much don't need to know anything other than a couple of text files and commands in order to do simple web stuff. It has a gui and is all pretty easy. Depends if you can be bothered messing about.

Cheers,
Kim.

steve,

Most of the bigger names would be fine for hosting a straight ahead html site. My experiences are as follows:

Dreamhost.com- hasn't been a dream

Dotster.com- A flurry of outages about a month ago, but has gotten solid again.

Webintellects.com-Been using for three years with about an outage a year. Have a couple storefronts hosted.

In the closet (at a customer site)- Never has gone down. If your ISP can assign you an IP or you want to try DDNS, my guess is you're not experiencing throughput like google anyway so you could do it.

Hope this helps,

Jeff

www.1and1.com Cheap, lots of features and very reliable. Everybody i know uses them and no one complains. Fantastic tech support, too.

I think I get a free month if you mention me.

Steve

I have been with Hostway.com for years and am very pleased. So far, it has never been down. They have a ton of useful tools when you log into their site and several different plans. I use the $13.05/month plan and I have the option of paying yearly if I want to also - which I do. For that price (the Gold Plan) I get 12 gig of web space! 250Gijg/mo monthly traffic, and up to 250 email accounts (yeah, like I need that many lol). Here is the llink if you want to investigate:

Somehow I knew the collective Paris brain would have the answer I was looking for.

Thanks all!

but who are those imposters at Paul's site? They don't look anything like the images of Paris folk I have in my head...

<http://www.doteasy.com>

free basic + services, paid for as you grow. They have HTML and much more.
I've used them for several sites both small biz and personal, zero hassles man.

I notice doteasy wants to transfer my existing domain to them. There doesn't seem to be a way around that either on the free one. hmm

I don't see how they could administer your domain if it was not transferred to them. But then again, I'm the ignorant guy here...

They've been responsive & helpful. I've had my mixing site with them for almost 3 years. They keep upgrading the plans and will upgrade your account with an email request. I'm satisfied.
