anybody know where i can get a response code nowadays? i've installed v3 on a new hard drive, and need to get one--- will very much appreciate--- also- may be a dumb question to post on the internet, for all to see, because of those who may not have a licensed copy of the software, but for those of us who do have a legitimate, purchased copy of it, what do we do when no one is any longer giving out response codes? is there some way to circumvent the need for a response code? i know, if you don't format the hard drive, then you don't need one, if you reinstall- but if you do format the drive, what do we do then, when there's nobody around anymore, to hand out response codes???

Send your request to support@intdevices.com. They're still around and should be for a long time...

Heya Harry - no fear, at last report Intelligent Devices was not only still giving out license codes for PARIS, they've actually stuck their toes back in the waters of pro audio again with some very cool VST plugins.

huh? no, i've never paid any money at all, to anybody, for any response code i've ever gotten. I DID pay around $300.00, if I remember the original price correctly, for the initial software though, when I first got it- which was at least several years ago, when it was first released---

Heh, I got bad news for you, Harry - that wasn't exactly "several" years ago, we're just celebrating its tenth birthday this week. Sure doesn't feel like it....
