Hi All,

Who said there would be no new PARIS software in 2007?

It's been my dream for years now, and I've finally managed to do something about it.

Attached is an updated copy of NoLIMIT with gain reduction meters for both the mono and stereo versions. The algo is unchanged.

There is currently only a PC version because I don't have a mac or any way to compile the mac version. I'd be happy to post the source if someone else would like to give the mac version a try.

Please post to this thread if you downloaded the file. I'm trying to gage demand for new PARIS plugins. I have no idea how much harder a whole new plugin would be, so I'm not making any promises, but it is my hope to get more of them out there.

Hope this brings a smile to someone's face!

All the best,

Mike

Cool! Done.

I'm switching the home system from Mac to XP because of the availability of plugins, so this will be nice.

Still counting on the reliability of my Mac system for tracking in the field, though...

Done - i'll try it on my rarely-used Paris rig.

HOWEVER... can you port it to VST? I'll throw you some cash if you can.

Seriously.

Hi Neil,

A friend of mine helped me read through the C++ over a couple of nights - I couldn't have done it without him. He suggested making a VST plug that loads paris plugs on the paris hardware and routs the audio between the card and the host app. That would make all of the PARIS plugs available in any VST aware app.

I'm definitely not at the point of coding something like that. But, I'd like to be. :)

Thanks Mike,

have at least a digital loop to pick up a few instances of NoLIMIT. This will help.

Mike,

Just downloaded today. Studio is cold storage while I am in between houses, but once we light, I'll give it a whirl.

Thanks for the work,

Jeff
