Pretty much. I'd rename it but it might stuff with things...

Cheers,
Kim.

Funny. I actually started with Samp and then incorporated PARIS.
Still use both constantly.

Deej, you DID tell this fellow Texan that the "Paris Newsgroup" was a newsgroup about the Paris audio system, not Paris, TX, right?

that deal fell thru a long time ago...Logic never did buy out Magix - actually I think it was just a distribution deal, anyway...

Samp 9 is pretty dadgum good, but DJ has been after me for a couple years to explore the Paris world...and here I is...

I exchanged emails with the CEO (Sven I think) in which he not only confirmed the acquisition/transaction but also stated that Emagic would be forthcoming about it's immediate plans for SAM. The first thing EMAGIC did was cut off the public support boards.

Despiye promising to do so, EMAGIC never made a clear statement regarding SAM component migration/demigrations to/from existing EMAGIC products. There was so much angst over absence of an EMAGIC position, not to mention a huge base of MAGIX loyals rebelling against the acquisition, think MAGIX and EMAGIC decided to execute an escape clause of some kind which had the legal effect of a transaction never having taken place.
