Yeah, Stevie. One of my favoritest songs ever is "You Haven't Done Nothin" on Fullfillingness . . . etc.

DANG!

what a freakin' great record....

Cranked it in the car today. OMG, I forgot how good that was.

Livin' just ENOUGH!

livin for the ci-tay...

Can I get a witness?

Witness.

We've got a list going here of records we have to buy. Innervations WAS on it. Its been in rotation now for a good many months. Great album.

Just moving, wonderful stuff.

It has not aged one whit.

I'll see your Innervisions and raise you a Music of My Mind / "Superwoman".
Freaking great music. I'm always listening to some Stevie because it's some of the happiest/hopeful stuff out there. Hey maybe Hillary will get some Stevie for a theme song and then I'll think she won't suck as a president (which she will).

Don't forget to check out

A time to love
fulfillingness
talking book
music of my mind
songs in the key of life (nicaquella is my favorite on that one).

It's all terrific music. Innervisions just hit me like a brick recently.

Maybe it's the times we live in.

the jeff beck solo in "looking for another true love"
is one of my all time favorites. I can listen to it forever.

Don't remember if it's on that one or "talking book."
Those first two or three stevie lps were great.

Stevie has always been timeless. Awesome stuff. On Superwoman, check out the super high Stevie harmonies. Sends chills every time. Check them out

2:09, 2:25, and 2:41

It's track 9 on Talking Book and Stevie says "Do it Jeff". hehe
That cascading falling arpeggio like thing at the end is cool.

I LOVE that song. Catchy, powerful, stands the test of time.

Stevie has the chops, has class, has unreal abilities and can't see the damn keys.

Great stuff.

It took some major string-pulling to get tickets for the Nov. 17 show at the garden. It was one of the best live shows I have ever been to. Song after song brought back intense memories and almost every intro brought the crowd to its feet.

Quite a bit of energy in the Garden that night for my favorite songwriter of all time.
